Food 'Czar' Demanded by House Group, Trade Body

Measure to Make Davis Supreme Approved; OPA Held Inefficient

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

In a strong pincers movement, the House Agriculture Committee and the food trades yesterday disregarded Administration wishes and demanded creation of an all-powerful wartime "czar."

On a vote of 18 to 8, the committee reported out legislation that would take all food rationing and pricing powers from the Office of Price Administration and place them under the War Food Administrator, Chester C. Davis.

Meantime, the Food Industry War Committee, meeting downtown to work out a duration food program, decided its efforts along this line would be meaningless until the divergent powers of OPA and WFA were consolidated.

"OPA Run Inefficiently"

Chairman Clarence Francis of the trades group said: "We are of the unanimous opinion OPA is being run very inefficiently and not in the public interest." The food situation is so critical, he said, appointment of a single person with full coordinated authority over it "should be a matter of hours, not days."

All 12 Republican members of the House committee, and six Democrats voted for the food "czar" bill, although War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes appeared before the group last week to protest its implications, and President Roosevelt expressed his opposition when the full committee called at the White House recently to discuss the idea.

Eight Democrats voting with the Administration to keep the OPA intact were Representatives Cooley, of North Carolina; Kleburg, of Texas; Flannagan, of Virginia; Zimmerman, of Missouri; Granger, of Utah; Creal, of Kentucky; McCord, of Tennessee, and Voorhis, of California.

More Pork Asked

Other developments on the tangled food front included:

1. Recommendation by the War Meat Board that civilian pork quotas be increased 10 per cent. The increase is needed if hog prices are to be supported at $13.75 a hundred pounds, it was declared. This support price, announced by the WFA in April, is guaranteed until September 30.

2. Plans by the WFA to requisition elevator stocks of corn to meet emergency needs of corn processing plants. A number of plants making corn starch, sirup, and other food products have closed this week as corn sales remained at a standstill.

How much corn any requisition order would yield was uncertain, but estimates at the Department of Agriculture indicated at least eight million bushels could be found "off the

Coffee Ration Jumped To Pound for 3 Weeks

Coffee at the rate of 1 pound each three weeks will become available to ration coupon holders on July 1 and again on July 22, the OPA announced yesterday. It is the most liberal rate since coffee rationing began.

Large stocks already on hand, as well as more regular arrival of imports, permit this increase, OPA said.

Stamp 21 in Ration Book 1 will become valid on July 1, and Stamp 22 on July 22.

500 Allied Planes Hit At Nazis' Atlantic Wall

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ONE-TWO PUNCH—R. A. F. planes from Britain which bombed Friedrichshafen, Germany, Sunday night, flew on to Africa, paused and returned home Wednesday night, striking at La Spezia, Italian naval base, on the return trip, the British Air Ministry announced yesterday. Chain of arrows indicates their probable route. Other air raids (black arrows) announced yesterday included Allied blows at Comiso, Sicily, and Olbia, Sardinia, and a German attack on the English port of Hull.

Attacks Roll On

Every day 66,000 American pilots take to the air over the face of the globe; 1600 planes of all types leave United States airport daily, while aircraft production workers set sights for a goal of 115,000 planes in the next 12 months, according to Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander of the Army Air Forces.

This dose of bad news for the Axis was delivered yesterday by Arnold to the House Civil Service Committee in justification for the growing need of civilan air force workers.

Gives Tribute to Men

Arnold's testimony, described by Chairman Ramspeck (Democrat) of Georgia as the frankest ever given the committee, was marked by unabashed pride in the accomplishments of America's Air Forces.

Complimented by the committee, Arnold passed the tribute along to his men.

"These youngsters (the American pilots) don't know the meaning of the word 'can't,'" Arnold said. "The

Over Germany Again

By the Associated Press

London, June 24.—The Allied air forces hurled 400 to 500 bombers and fighters against Hitler's "Atlantic Wall" defenses from the Netherlands to Cherbourg Peninsula by daylight today after pounding the Italian naval base of La Spezia in a significant and unique England-Africa shuttle bombing.

The R. A. F. quickly returned to the attack after dark to keep the battering assault on a round-the-clock basis. Waves of heavy bombers were heard roaring across the Southeast coast toward the continent, flying at great height. It was announced later that they had raided Germany.

The swarms of five type of Allied craft, joining in one of the busiest day offensives of the air war over Europe, struck at Nazi airfields and war installations along the French, Belgian and Dutch coasts.

P-47 Thunderbolts, the fastest and heaviest-gunned United States single-seat fighters, joined Spitfires, Typhoons and American-made Venturas, Bostons and Mitchells of the R. A. F. in the virtually unprecedented day sweeps.

Later Mitchell light bombers with Spitfire escorts attacked airfields at Brest and Typhoon fighter-bombers raided Morlaix airport, meeting no opposition. In the evening, Venturas bombed a power station at Yainville near Rouen.

La Spezia was pounded early today by several squadrons of Lancaster bombers in a surprise assault after these same planes had smashed at Friedrichshafen in southern Germany Sunday night and then flown on to North Africa to rest and refuel. The flight in-

U. S. Air Force in Philippines Defended by MacArthur

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Friday), June 25.—Gen. Douglas MacArthur today expressed support of the action of Maj. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton in handling air forces in the Philippines at the beginning of the war. General MacArthur thus took cognizance of statements which he said implied criticism of General Brereton.

Preparations in the Philippines were planned carefully and executed valiantly," the general said in a special statement.

"Any attempt to decry their record can spring only from complete lack of knowledge of facts involved."

The general said recent articles left the implication "that through neglect or faulty judgment he (Brereton) failed to take proper security measures, resulting in destruction of his air force on the ground."

"His tiny force was crushed by sheer weight of numbers. Its combat crews fought valiantly but were hopelessly outnumbered."

General MacArthur pointed out that at the start of the war General Brereton had "only a token force" of 35 heavy bombers and 72 fighters. Additionally, he was handicapped by a lack of airdromes, with only Clark Field usable by heavy bombers and only five fields usable by fighters.

Other fields were being constructed but they were not available before December 7, 1941.

General MacArthur said the entire command was placed on a full war basis two weeks before December 7 and security and reconnaissance patrols had been flown regularly. Two of four squadrons of heavy bombers were

Subsidies Face Defeat In Congress

Administration's Rollback Program Under Attack by Senate and House

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Administration last night was threatened with a thoroughgoing congressional drubbing on virtually every phase of its subsidized rollback and holdback of prices.

A strong probability that the Senate as well as the House either will amputate the price rollback on consumer table foods or seriously slash it developed last night.

In the Senate, leaders privately conceded that the vote was too close for comfort on an amendment by Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri, to repeal all price act authority for retail price subsidies.

In the House, the Banking Committee slated the second meeting in two days on a hardly less drastic antisubsidy amendment to the Commodity Credit Corporation bill, duplicating in effect the OPA subsidy freeze-out approved last week by the House.

The Administration yesterday chose the Senate to make its last stand for subsidized price control. There, key Administration Senators were advised that the whole hold-the-line price structure was at stake in the Senate's subsidy decision, expected today. As in the House, the argument made little headway.

The Clark amendment to the billion-dollar CCC bill, completely shutting off price subsidies, gathered unexpected strength as a large bloc of New England and Western Senators joined the repeal move.

To win these sectional groups,

Brown Calls Subsidies Necessary for Control

Price Administrator Prentiss Brown declared in a radio talk last night that he cannot administer price control without the use of subsidies.

He said also that the cut in OPA appropriations voted by the House last week will, if agreed to by the Senate, cripple the Nation's hold-the-line wage and price program into uselessness. (Details on Page 3.)

Submarines Fail To Check Supplies Bound for Africa

A North African Port, June 24 (AP).—Adolf Hitler's marauding submarines have failed to check the flow of food supplies and war materials to the Fifth American Army in North Africa and during the last six months the loss of shipments has been "absolutely negligible," the commanding general of this base section said today.

The officer said that more than one million tons of shipping had arrived here and that convoys continue to stream into these ports with greater tonnages than before.

"The Navy and the Merchant Marine have done a wonderful job," the general said. "Before, in supplies sent to the Army from the United States we estimated a certain percentage of loss from submarine attacks on convoys. But those losses have been considerably lower than we figured they would be."

Wants to Know Fate Of Antistrike Bill; Midnight Tonight Deadline on Measure

President Roosevelt's plan to draft strikers in Government-held plants yesterday received a congressional cold-shoulder.

Members wanted to know first what the President was going to do with the Connally-Smith antistrike bill.

By midnight tonight he must either veto the bill, sign it, or let it become law without his signature. There was a growing congressional impression that a veto is on the way and this tempered comment on the President's proposed labor draft.

In the Senate, Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, commended Mr. Roosevelt for what he called his "work or fight" plan but told the Senate it must be considered supplemental to the Connally-Smith bill.

Fears Implication of "Deal"

"I believe that a veto would have a disastrous effect on the morale of this country," said Byrd. "If the President vetoes the Connally-Smith bill millions of Americans will feel that a deal has been made with John L. Lewis in which Lewis promised to keep the mines going."

Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, co-author of the measure invoking criminal penalties against leaders of strikes in Government-held plants, interrupted Byrd to ask "what will happen on October 31." Connally implied that without the Connally-Smith bill there would be nothing to prevent the mine workers from striking again.

In the House, Chairman Andrew May of the Military Affairs committee said his committee planned no action on the proposed labor draft until the President submits the plan to Congress. May said the committee's action might depend on the fate of the anti-strike bill.

Hint National Service Act

Some of the House committee members who took an active part in drafting the antistrike measure, suggested that a National Service Act along lines of the Austin-Wadsworth bill, might be preferable to giving the President power to draft men up to 65 for noncombat military duty.

In one well informed Senate quarter it was suggested that Congress might send antistrike legislation back to the White House in any labor draft bill it might pass. If the President vetoes the Connally-Smith measure.

Overtime Bill Again Delayed By Senate Vote

Conferees' Report Rejected, 52 to 17; Thousands Miss Pay

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

By an overwhelming majority the Senate late yesterday rejected a conference report on the 143 million dollar urgent deficiency bill for 1943, sending the measure back to conference, and delaying still further overtime pay for thousands of Federal workers and full pay for thousands of District employes.

The Senate voted 52 to 17 to reject the conferees report because of adoption of a House amendment requiring that no Federal funds be used to pay the salaries of three Government workers accused of membership in subversive organizations.

Already delayed for months over the House amendment, the bill, providing for 121 million dollars in overtime pay for Federal workers in every agency except the War and Navy Departments, faces a June 30 deadline marking the end of the current fiscal year.

Teachers Payless Today

Today 3500 District school teachers will go payless because of failure to pass the bill. Already 1206 custodial employes of the District have missed a payday, while statutes prevent the District from borrowing money or issuing script.

If the bill does not become law by July 1, the President is permitted to advance salaries and overtime from his emergency fund. The bill also makes the overtime pay raises retroactive.

Sharp debate in the Senate on the conference report, adopted by a huge majority in the House several days ago, was centered upon the provision to bar Dr. Robert Morss Lovett, Government secretary to the Virgin Islands; Goodwin B. Watson and William E. Dodd, jr., from Federal employment by forbidding payment of their salaries.

Opponents of the House amendment charged that passage of the Woman Member, Johnson Clash In House Debate

By Robert De Vore

Luther A. Johnson, elder statesman from Texas, took the House floor yesterday to administer a verbal chastisement to Clare Boothe Luce and discovered that the young gentlelady from Connecticut is too old to be spanked.

Mrs. Luce, 40, blonde, beautiful and Republican, tangled with Johnson, 67, gray-haired and a Democrat, during a turbulent House debate on United States foreign policy—or the lack of it—until the gentlelady started.

How Battle Began

She started the scrap by referring to President Roosevelt as "the world's outstanding isolationist," by calling Johnson a "renegade isolationist" and by asserting that went for the man in the White House, as well. That the man in the White House was no better.

She began the free-for-all in a speech in which she called for an American foreign policy whose "foundation stone" should be "a permanent military alliance, or non-aggression pact, with Great Britain and the self-governing members of the commonwealth."

Democrats hailed the battle put up by Johnson with a standing ovation for the veteran legislator, while from the Republican side came rebel yells rendered in such a derisive manner as to demonstrate that this traditional form of Democracy's cry of triumph can be utilized as an admirable substitute for the bronx cheer.

"Devastating Phrases"

"The distinguished lady," began Johnson, "who always comes prepared with beautiful and devastating phrases based largely on her own views and frequently unsupported by logic or facts, has just entertained the House with one of her clever addresses.

"It is easy for one who has not been a member of the House until this session and who has never voted upon any measure coming up in the House during the last 10 years, to be free to criticize all

The War Labor Board is expected to insist that President Roosevelt secure compliance with its order to John L. Lewis to sign a contract with the coal operators or take steps to smash the United Mine Workers, it was learned yesterday.

The board's position crystallized as an estimated 40 per cent of the country's coal miners remained away from the pits in protest against the WLB order which denied them "portal to portal" pay.

As the WLB pressed for a final showdown with the United Mine Workers, Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, Government operator of the mines, announced that he was undertaking "active participation in the supervision of management and operation of the mines."

Ickes Calls Parley

Ickes invited 29 principal owners and operators to meet with him today "to take stock of the situation." It was indicated that he would appoint a committee headed by a veteran operator to run the mines.

It is understood that members of the War Labor Board plan to convey to the White House a protest against continuing Government operation of the mines without applying sanctions to Lewis to secure full compliance with the board's order.

WLB members—public, industry and labor—believe it would be an injustice to permit the mines to remain in Government hands on Lewis' terms when it is the U. M. W., not the coal operators which is in defiance. Lewis ordered the miners back to work Tuesday specifying that they would return until October 31, on condition that the mines remain in Government hands. Operators protested acceptance of these terms by the Government.

Carmen Beach Denies Charges

More Diplomats Mentioned As Vice Trial Is Concluded

Defense and prosecution concluded their arguments late yesterday before the jury trying Carmen Beach Martin on four charges of violating the White Slave Traffic Act, after a day of testimony which revealed a new high in diplomatic-military involvement with the defendant's alleged prostitution set-up here in Washington.

Grilled under cross-examination for more than six hours, Mrs. Martin persisted in a sharp-faced calm, only the plucking of her brilliantly colored fingernails showing her agitation as she described extensive associations with "ambassadors," "certain Chinese diplomatic gentlemen," "an Army captain," "naval commander," an "architect" and just an ordinary "gambler, named Mr. Brown."

"Mr. Brown," despite the comparative obscurity of his profession, apparently rated high with the defendant. She related how she and Dorothy Smitely, at her invitation, went to the Hamilton Hotel in order to accompany the "gambler" to a race track. Brown, she insisted, had been introduced to her three months before by a "Commander Barry" in the cocktail lounge of the Mayflower Hotel.

Questioned more closely by Prosecutor Margolius about the actual purpose of her visit, however, Mrs. Martin rose suddenly and, pointing her finger at the courtroom audience, shrieked, "Why don't you ask Mr. Brown. He's sitting out there next to my first husband." When an order by Judge Matthew McGuire to "Mr. Brown" to step forward produced no one, however, the defendant subsided and declared she had seen him earlier but that he had probably left the court.

The three apartments she leased at 1322 Fifteenth Street Northwest, Mrs. Martin admitted, were all rented to men. A "diplomat from New Zealand, named Ander," occupied one and an architect, iden-

9 Jap Subs Sunk Off West Coast, Newspaper Says

Los Angeles, June 24 (AP).—The Los Angeles Times says at least nine Japanese submarines possibly others, have been sunk off California and Oregon by Navy and Coast Guard surface and air forces since Pearl Harbor.

The Times says the tabulation was entirely unconfirmed by the Navy but based upon substantial data.

Most of the Jap subs were sunk in the opening weeks of the war, says the newspaper, after six American freighters had been attacked offshore, and the effect was to drive the Nipponese subs from American waters.

Axis Pulling In Some of Its Isle Garrisons

By the Associated Press

London, June 24.—The Axis was reported tonight to be shortening its anti-invasion defenses, pulling back some of its island garrisons and concentrating more strength in the Balkans apparently in expectation of a massive Allied blow from the southeast.

An unofficial source, who would not permit his name to be used but who has continental connections, said the movement extended from Sardinia eastward to the Dodecanese, while Ankara dispatches quoted a Balkan source as saying the Axis had 75 divisions, or approximately 1,125,000 troops, stationed in Yugoslavia, Greece, Crete and some of the larger Aegean islands.

The German radio tended to bear out this wholly unconfirmed report, stating that the Italian garrison on Castelrosso already had been withdrawn. This tiny island off southern Turkey is considered easy prey for Allied amphibious forces attacking from nearby Cyprus or Syria, where the Axis has said powerful Allied units were massing.

Spanish dispatches relayed from Madrid and broadcast by Berlin said four British battleships, two antiaircraft carriers, and 18 destroyers were concentrated at Gibraltar, while two other battleships had left that British naval bastion and put out into the Mediterranean yesterday.

The British Admiralty announced that its submarines had sunk 13 Axis ships and damaged six others in Mediterranean operations extending from the southern French coast eastward to the Aegean Sea. Those sunk were a 7000-ton armed merchant ship, two auxiliary vessels, and 10 supply ships, the communique said.

Axis apprehensions of an Allied move in the eastern Mediterranean were reflected in a Rome announcement that Italian planes had attacked an airfield in Latakia, which lies on the eastern Mediterranean coast north of Lebanon, and communications at Fuka, Egypt. These points represent the ends of an Allied pincers menacing Axis positions on Crete and in the Balkans.

The unofficial source who told of a withdrawal of Axis island garrisons, presumably to the Italian mainland in an attempt to find a stronger defense line, gave this picture of the situation:

Sicily—The Garrison has been cut to four Italian divisions, whereas ten days ago it numbered from five to six divisions. There are no Germans in Sicily except some airforce and special units.

Sardinia—A garrison of two Italian divisions; no Germans are there.

Corsica—Two Italian divisions and one under-sized German regiment man this occupied French island above Sardinia.

Lower Italy—Three Italian divisions are located in the two "toe provinces; there is negligible troop strength in the "heel," and there are indications that the main holding line is being developed somewhere between the toe and a line drawn between Naples and Taranto.

This source estimated that the Germans in the remainder of Italy number 60,000—far below the 200,000 reported there some months ago. The Germans, reported recently as moving through the Brenner Pass into Italy, apparently were shifted on southeastward into the Balkans.

Axis strength in the Balkans consists of 37 Italian divisions, 18 German and 20 Bulgarian, an informed Balkan source said in Ankara.

Berlin Radio Says Great Landslide Damage Gibraltar

London, June 24 (AP).—The Berlin radio quoted dispatches from Seville today as saying that a sudden landslide had dislodged a million tons of earth and rock from the eastern face of Gibraltar.

The broadcast, which was recorded by the Associated Press, said it would take more than a year to clear away the debris and British military authorities had decided to build new approaches to replace those obliterated by the slide.

There was no confirmation of the report from British sources.

Over Europe

Gen. Forrest Is Missing On Bomber

BRIG. GEN. NATHAN BEDFORD FORREST,

38-year-old grandson of the famous Confederate general of the same name, who was aboard an American heavy bomber which failed to return from an attack on Kiel June 13, it was announced officially yesterday

London (Friday), June 25.—Brig. Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest, 38, great-grandson of the famous Confederate general of the same name, was aboard an American heavy bomber which failed to return from an attack on Kiel June 13, it was announced officially early today. The plane is officially listed as "missing."

Forrest, a native of Memphis, Tenn., whose wife resides at Spokane, Wash., was the first American general to become a combat casualty in the European theater.

He had arrived in England only a short time before he rode as an observer aboard a Flying Fortress piloted by Capt. Harry A. Stirwalt of Spokane, Wash.

Stirwalt's plane led the raiders into what has been described officially as the greatest air battle over Europe.

There was a possibility that those aboard the general's bomber survived—providing they escaped the enemy's fire. Returned crewmen said they saw Forrest's damaged plane, one engine smoking badly and a tail section partially shot off, straggle from the bitterly besieged formations and spiral downward several thousand feet, still under control.

Of the numerous airmen interviewed, however, none said he was able to watch the general's Fortress all the way down because of being "too damn busy fighting off those German so-and-sos."

Lieut. Robert C. Cozens, 24, of Encinitas, Calif., pilot on the Fortress Patsy Ann, flying directly behind Forrest, said the general's bomber emerged from the initial enemy attacks at the German coast with one engine "smoking like hell."

Cozens said six Germans concentrated on the lead bomber in ferocious, head-on stabs, and added:

"But he flew on and led us over the bomb run. As we turned off the target the general's ship again was attacked. I saw it slow down, drop out of formation."

Flight Officer James W. Reed of Starkville, Miss., copilot, and Lieut. Earl T. De Wolf of Barstow, Calif., bombardier on Cozens' Fortress, said they saw three fighters swoop over Forrest's bomber and savagely strafe it with cannon and machine guns.

General Forrest left Fort George Wright, at Spokane, Wash., then Second Air Force headquarters a month ago. He was graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1928.

Forrest, who flew to England to assume command of a bomber wing, was reputed to be one of the Army's best pilots as well as a gunnery expert. Personally briefing the gunners before the pre-dawn take-off, his parting words were "Good luck, men, I'll be flying in the lead ship."

General Forrest was one of the youngest generals in the United States Army and has had a brilliant military career.

Explaining his eagerness for action on arrival here, Forrest had said, "I don't like to give orders until I've had an opportunity to find out for myself what it's like over there," according to Maj. F. J. Donahue of Washington, D. C.

Others aboard the bomber included Maj. Allan W. Wilder, Garden City, Long Island, N. Y., copilot and squadron commander; First Lieuts. Walter J. Thimm, Chicago, navigator; Willard W. Brown, Clevelandk Robert L. McNuit, jr., Birmingham, Ala., bombardier; Donald V. Scavotto, Seattle, former assistant district attorney at Seattle, a pilot who rode the general's ship as tailgunner.

Allied Planes Pound Sicily And Sardinia

By Noland Norgaard
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 24.—Bomber squadrons from the twin Allied air commands in the Mediterranean—R. A. F. heavyweights from Middle East bases and Wellingtons flying under the Northwest African command—have again spread fire and steel over Sicilian and Sardinian targets, it was announced today.

The Middle East forces on Tuesday night drove in over the Mediterranean to assault the Italian airdrome at Comiso in Sicily, which was left blazing with two violent explosions, and the hangar and workshops were squarely hit. This attack cost no Allied planes.

At the same time, said Gen. Dwight Eisenhower's communique, the Northwest Africa Wellingtons threw in an assault upon the docks at Olbia, in Sardinia, leaving the harbor area alight.

Other formations attached to this headquarters carried out patrol sweeps, in which an enemy tanker was sunk. In all operations, the cost was two Allied planes.

Fighter-bombers from Malta, the third base from which the Allied air offensive is being carried on, continued their long attacks on Italian transport, this time bombing the railway sidings at Pozzallo, Sicily. A German plane was shot down by British Spitfires.

The Wellington smash at Olbia was the first blow at Sardinia since last Friday, the week's earlier operations all having been turned against Sicily and the Italian mainland. In addition to Olbia's docks, an enemy ship in harbor was set afire.

The Italian command, in a communique broadcast from Rome, claimed without any Allied confirmation that Italian torpedo planes had sunk a 15,000-ton Allied steamer and damaged a 7000-ton Allied tanker off Algeria.

The Italians asserted, too, that Axis bombers had raided an airdrome at Latakia "with good results."

(Latakia is a Levant port opposite the British island of Cyprus, which might be a marshaling point for projected Allied air operations in the eastern Mediterranean.

(The Rome radio broadcast a report that the Allied military had posted rewards for the capture of enemy agents, observing that this was another in a series of measures to conceal "offensive (Allied) preparations along the northern Syrian frontier.")

Nazis Report Russian Break Through Lines

By the Associated Press

London, (Friday) June 25.—German dispatches reported early today that the Red army had smashed into Axis lines south of Velikie Luki, only 80 miles from the Latvian border, but said a German counterattack had sealed off the breach in this sector, which had been comparatively quiet for months.

The regular midnight Moscow bulletin did not specifically name the Velikie Luki sector, but said Soviet scouts and artillery had destroyed 12 dugouts and 8 machine guns west of Moscow. Velikie Luki is 275 miles west of the Soviet capital.

A special Moscow broadcast also announced that the Germans lost 19 planes in attempted daylight attacks Wednesday on Towns near Leningrad. Four Russian planes were lost in blocking the raiders, which failed even to reach the towns, said the announcement, which reported only local ground fighting.

The German controlled Paris radio reported the fighting at Velikie Luki, but did not indicate whether the engagement was a large scale one.

In the air the Russians said their airmen and gunners downed five German aircraft during the day.

Steinbeck Sees a Gallant Show by 'Little Names' on Troopship

Writing from England, where he has just arrived on an assignment as a war correspondent for The Washington Post, John Steinbeck continues his description of life aboard the crowded troop transport on which he traveled.

By John Steinbeck

Somewhere in England, June 24. A small USO unit is aboard this troopship, girls' and men who are going out to entertain troops wherever they may be sent. These are not the big names who go out with blasts of publicity and maintain their radio contracts. These are girls who can sing and dance and look pretty and men who can do magic, pantomimists and tellers of jokes. They have few properties and none of the tricks of light and color which dress up the theater. But there is something very gallant about them. The theater is the only institution in the world which has been dying for 4000 years and has never succumbed. It requires tough and devoted people to keep it alive. An accordion was the largest piece of property the troup carried. The evening dresses, crushed in suitcases, must be pressed and kept pretty. The spirit must be high. This is trouping the really hard way.

STEINBECK

The theater is one of the largest mess halls. Soldiers are packed in, sitting on benches, standing on tables, lying in the doorways. A little platform on one end is the stage. Tonight the loud speaker is out of order, but when it isn't it blares and distorts voices. The master of cermonies gets up and faces his packed audience. He tells a joke—but this audience is made up of men from different parts of the country and each part has its own kind of humor. He tells a New York joke. There is a laugh, but a limited one. The men from South Dakota and Oklahoma do not understand this joke. They laugh late, merely because they want to laugh. He tries another joke and this time he plays safe. It is an Army joke about M. P.'s. This time it works. Everybody likes a joke about M. P.'s.

He introduces an acrobatic dancer, a pretty girl with long legs and the strained smile acrobats develop to conceal the fact that their muscles are crying with tension. The ship is rolling slowly from side to side. All of her work is dependent on perfect balance. She tries each part of her act several times and is thrown off balance, but, seriously, she tries again until, in a pause in the ship's roll, she succeeds and legs are distorted properly for the proper two seconds. The soldiers are with her. They know the difficulty. They want her to succeed and they cheer when she does. This is all very serious. She leaves the stage under whistles and cheers.

A blues singer follows. Without the loudspeaker she can hardly be heard, for her voice, although sweet, has no volume. She forces her voice for volume and loses her sweetness, but she is pretty and young and earnest.

A girl accordion player comes next. She asks for suggestions. This is to be group singing and the requests are for old songs—"Harvest Moon," "Home on the Range," "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling." The men bellow the words in all pitches. There is no war song for this war. The show continues—a pantomimist who acts out the physical examination of an inductee and does it so accurately that his audience howls. A magician in traditional tail coat manipulates colored silks.

In all the acts the illusion does not quite come off. The audience helps all it can because it wants the show to be good. And out of the little acts, which are not quite convincing, and the big audience which wants literally to be convinced, something whole and good comes, so that when it is over there has been a show.

One of the men in the unit has been afraid. He has not slept since the ship sailed. He is afraid of the ocean and of submarines. He has lain in his bunk, listening for the blast that will kill him. He is probably very brave. He does his act when he is terrified. It is foolish to say he should not be afraid. He is afraid, and that is something he cannot control, but he does his act, and that is something he can control.

Up on the deck in the blackness the colored troops are sprawled. They sit quietly. A great bass voice sings softly a bar of the hymn "When the Saints Go In." A voice says: "Sing it, brother!"

The bass takes it again and a few other voices join him. By the time the hymn has reached the fourth bar an organ of voices is behind it. The voices take on a beat, feeling one another out. The chords begin to form. There is nothing visible. The booming voices come out of the darkness. The men sing sprawled out, lying on their backs. The song becomes huge with authority. This is a war song. This could be the war song. Not the sentimental wash about lights coming on again or bluebirds.

The black deck rolls with sound. One chorus ends and another starts "When the Saints Go In." Four times and on the fifth the voices fade away to a little hum and the deck is silent again. The ship rolls and metal protests against metal. The ship is silent again. Only the shudder of the engine and the whisk of water and the whine of the wind in the wire rigging break the silence.

We have not yet a singing Army nor any songs for a singing Army. Synthetic emotions and nostalgias do not take hold because the troops know instinctively that they are synthetic. No one has yet put words and melody to the real homesickness, the real terror and the real ferocity of the war.

Planes Collide, One Falls in Path of Train

By the Associated Press

Southville, Mass., June 24.—The flaming wreckage of one of two Army planes that collided today at a high altitude plumeted into the path of a passenger train, derailing the engine and five coaches, two of which caught fire.

One pilot perished—his body was found a quarter of a mile from his wrecked ship—and the other parachuted to safety several hundred yards from the Boston & Albany Railroad tracks.

The engineer of the Worcester-to-Boston-bound-train was slightly injured, but railroad officials said none of the approximately 150 passengers was hurt.

Two small boys ran around a bend in the railroad tracks to halt the train, which was due shortly after the crash. One of them pulled off a red shirt and waved it as a signal, but the engineer was unable to stop.

Air brakes screeched as the train crew spotted the boys and wreckage, but the engineer said the intense heat of the burning plane had spread the rails and the cars left the track.

Passengers left the cars hurriedly and members of the train crew stood by, assisting them, until all were out of danger.

Civilian defense plane spotters at the Southville observation tower had been watching the two planes when they collided, burst in flames, and dropped within 1000 feet of each other.

As two other ships, which had been flying with them, circled the area, apparently to attract attention to the accident, the spotters put in calls for firemen, police and ambulances. More than a score of other persons saw the planes come down and immediately rushed to assist.

Einstein to Study Navy's Ordnance Problems at Home

New York, June 24 (INS).—Prof. Albert Einstein, world-famous physicist who came to America as a voluntary exile from Nazi Germany in 1933 and became an American citizen in 1940, has "joined" the U. S. Navy.

The current issue of Star Shell, publication of the Navy Department's Ordnance Bureau, reveals that the eminent 64-year-old scientist has signed up as a "staff member extraordinary" of the Ordnance Bureau and will do special research on the phenomena governing explosives.

Einstein, whose theory of relativity rocked the scientific world two decades ago, will work on a part-time basis for the Navy at the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, N. J.

The Navy Ordnance Bureau publication said:

"The best-known mind of the world today . . . will turn his renowned talents toward the theory of explosion, seeking to determine what laws govern the more obscure waves of detonation, why certain explosives have marked directional effect, and other highly technical theories completely out of the ken of the average layman."

Negro Air Unit Includes D. C. Pilot

MITCHELL

The Army Air Forces fighter squadron in North Africa, composed of Negro pilots, including one Washingtonian, weathered its first aerial combat test on June 18, when six of its planes encountered a larger formation of German fighters, damaging two of the enemy without loss to themselves.

The War Department stated yesterday the squadron had previously seen action over Pantelleria and its pilots did patrol duty, escorted heavy bombers and served as fighter bombers with other units of the tactical air force over Pantelleria and Lampedusa.

Local participant in the June 18 engagement was Second Lieut. Paul G. Mitchell of 908 Howard Road Southeast.

A son of Mrs. Pauline G. Mitchell, he was born here June 26, 1919. He was graduated from Cardozo High School and received his B. S. degree from Hampton Institute in 1941. One of the first college students to enroll in the C. A. A. flying program in 1940, he received his primary training at Hampton and his secondary training at Tuskegee, Ala.

He entered the Army in November, 1941, when he was stationed with the Ordnance Department at Fort Meade, Md., and was transferred to the Air Forces in March, 1942. He received his wings at Tuskegee July 5, 1942, and went overseas last April.

Brown Appeals for Subsidies; Says He Cannot Control Prices Without Them

Price Administrator Prentiss Brown last night declared he cannot administer price control without the use of subsidies, and said the cut in OPA appropriation imposed by the House last week will—if agreed to by the Senate—cripple the Nation's hold-the-line program into uselessness.

When the price control laws were passed, he asserted in a radio speech directed to the general public, it was apparent the program would require "the use of Government funds."

Subsidies, the OPA chief declared, provide the cheapest method of securing production and are necessary "not only to roll back the cost of living to the level to which we are committed, but to hold it there."

The President and the War Labor Board, Brown said, have courageously prevented a serious break on the wage front and it is now more than ever necessary "that we hold on the price front."

When Congress takes its recess in July, the administrator declared, it will find the people behind price control. Pressure groups are strong in the Capital and they often blind Congressmen to what the average citizen is thinking, he contended.

"Only when a member can talk with those he knows have no pet cause to plead; can he get the real lowdown on American thinking. I am glad for this reason that Congress is going home," he said.

All ground lost on the cost-of-living front since September 15 must be retaken, he declared, for the alternative of raising wages to match the rise "cannot be considered."

The roll-back subsidy program on meat and butter will save the consumer between two and three dollars and "the Government at least two dollars for every dollar paid out in subsidies," he said, terming the program the "soundest kind of finance."

On this program, he said, the OPA was faced with two alternatives. Other than the subsidy, prices on meat could have been reduced at the farm level. Since the Price Control Act specifies farm prices must not be placed lower than parity, the lower ceiling at agricultural levels was impossible.

If retail prices were to be stabilized at last September 15 levels and "a fair and equitable margin maintained for the various processors and middle men" as stipulated by law, Brown declared, the subsidy was the only way out.

He reiterated his promise to extend community dollar and cents ceilings to all market basket foods, and urged Americans to arouse themselves to the dangers of inflation "before it is too late."

Stern but Wise Peace to Follow War, Devers Says

London (Friday), June 25 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, U. S. commander in chief in the European theater, declared in a speech last night that final victory would be followed by "an intelligent and sternly just peace."

General Devers opened a three-day advanced course in international affairs for representatives of the United States, British and Canadian armed forces.

Americans, he said, knew their existence was inseparable from that of other nations, great and small, and that international affairs had become their affairs.

"Momentous changes" would be brought about by the war," he said, "and we must face the fact that the postwar period will require as much courage, possibly even more fortitude, as the war years themselves."

Head of Morocco Heads for Vichy

Algiers, June 24 (INS).—The five-star French Gen. Auguste Nogues, whose resignation as Governor of Morrocco was demanded and obtained by Gen. Charles De Gaulle, today was revealed to have slipped quietly out of French Africa into Tangiers, Spanish Morocco, enroute to Lisbon, and presumably headed for pro-Axis Vichy.

farm." This would be enough to run processing plants about a month, or until the serious feed-grain-livestock situation could be cleared up.

3. A plan offered by the Independent Meat Packers as a solution to the "beef strike" which is keeping beef from civilians and endangering the Government's efforts to get supplies for the armed forces. It asks suspension for 30 days of all ceilings below the retail level on beef, veal and lamb.

If the meat ceilings were suspended, packers promised Government representatives, the trade could adjust itself and packers could get plenty of beef on the market at a fair profit to themselves. As an illustration of what would happen, a spokesman picked a beef cut with a retail ceiling of 39 cents a pound and a wholesale ceiling of 23 cents. He said the wholesale price would move to 27 cents without the ceiling. Retailers would not object to this, he argued, and large packers would be willing for it to be tried out.

Packers Won't Agree

Large packing houses represented at the War Food Industry Committee meeting, however, would not agree to such a trial, Victor Norton of Cudahy declared.

"That would offer no solution to our problem, and would only increase the black markets," Norton said, predicting that more beef would go onto the market when slaughterers were able to operate without losing money.

Francis said food industries were being forced out of business at an alarming rate. "There were profits until May 10, when the communjty ceilings went into effect, but there have been none since, he said.

The President's hold-the-line order has made it impossible for OPA to operate under the price control act, he charged. The act specifies that fluctuating parity ceilings must be paid at agricultural levels and that "fair margins of profit" must be guaranteed the food trade. With retail ceilings held rigid, there is no chance for a profit, he contended.

A "proper balance all along the line" must be reached before retail ceilings can be rigid, he declared his group believed. This balance for all food items in the cost-of-living index, and no price control for luxuries, were advocated.

Congress Threatening Administration Defeat on Rollback Program

Senator Clark had agreed to exempt subsidies on transportation of oil, gas and coal to the fuel-starved East, and subsidized production of strategic war metals such as copper, demanded by the West.

Clark agreed to accept the transportation and strategic materials exemptions just as the Senate was starting to vote on flat repeal of all price subsidies. Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia promptly offered an amendment embracing the change. The vote went over until today.

If the amendment is adopted, and concurred in by the House, the rollback on prices on coffee, meats and butter, and related price subsidy programs, would go out the window and the Administration will have to find another price control alternative.

Consumers to Suffer

Congressmen from urban districts, now organized in a House consumer bloc, insist that there is no other alternative; that if subsidies go out, prices will go up, and consumers with fixed incomes will be the first to suffer.

An unprecedented consumers' "convention" called by the bloc will be held in the House Caucus Room today, attended by representatives of labor, women's and other organized consumers' groups. Leaders of the group say similar "conventions" will be arranged in every section of the country in an effort to educate the public to the inflationary consequences of a price control collapse. Representatives of the groups already were busy buttonholing members. Mayor LaGuardia of New York is scheduled to address today's meeting, and the Administration has been invited to send a speaker.

Various Moves Planned

Clark's Senate move to repeal price subsidy authority was in effect a complete substitute for the Taft-Bankhead amendment placing a 500 million dollar RFC ceiling on rollback subsidies and allowing CCC up to 175 million dollars for related programs. If it is defeated, an equally sweeping ban by Senator Aikens (Republican) of Vermont and Gillette (Democrat) of Iowa, will go to a vote. If that fails, subsidy opponents will attempt to scale down subsidy funds.

Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio, who joined Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama in defense of limited subsidies contended the 500 million dollars ceiling is in itself a restriction on the subsidy program. He said that the way to control subsidies is by fixing an over-all figure. Taft argued that the Government already is embarked on so many subsidy programs it would be unwise to indiscriminately repeal the authority.

Clark insisted it would be better to repeal all Price Act subsidy authority and later reinstate such programs as are essential. Clark and other Senate rollback opponents charged that OPA, CCC, and RFC had exceeded Price Act authority by subsidizing processors rather than producers.

Senator Reed (Republican) of Kansas declared the rollback program itself is inflationary. Reed told the Senate:

"The whole proposition of price and wage freezes has been put to the public on a basis of complete misrepresentation of fact. The rollback and subsidy program would free purchasing power of consumers and increase inflationary pressure."

Working with other ranking members of the House Banking Committee and with Farm Bureau Federation support, Representative Wolcott (Republican) of Michigan meanwhile completed an antisubsidy amendment as air-tight as Clark's. The Wolcott amendment is slated for a House committee test today.

Union Official Protests Rail Pay Reversal

George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, has vigorously objected to President Roosevelt against the action of Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson setting aside a proposed 8 cents an hour wage increase for 1,100,000 railroad workers.

Harrison, it was understood, declared he was greatly shocked by the action, believing on the basis of previous conversations with the President that the proposed increase would be approved without any difficulty.

Harrison is in Washington with representatives of the 14 other nonoperating railroad unions involved in the wage boost to consider the situation, it was learned.

Vinson refererred the wage case back to the emergency presidential panel that made the recommendation with the understanding that the panel revise it in the light of War Labor Board stabilization policies. There was some chance that the revision would be downward.

Harrison, it was said, previously had the impression that the railroad workers had a chance to receive not only the 8 cents an hour boost, but time and a half wages after 40 hours in addition.

He received this impression, it was said, on the basis of comments by the President at a press conference that he had suggested that railway management and labor consider the possibility of paying time and a half after 40 hours like other industries instead of after 48 hours as at present.

augurated a shuttle of great potentialities.

Today's targets in the furious daylight battering launched from Britain were oil storage targets in Flushing, Holland, and in France freight yards at St. Omer, an airfield at nearby Fort Rouge, the airfield at Abbeville and another at Maupertus near Cherbourg.

The hardhitting Allied planes ruled the skies during the attack, beating off the best efforts of German day fighters to break up the operation.

The thunderbolts shot down one Focke-Wulf 190, and damaged another, while R. A. F. Spitfires downed 10 more and probably destroyed others.

The Americans came home without a single loss. British and other Allied losses were one bomber and four fighters.

Thus the Allies although fighting over enemy territory and often over his airfields and in range of his antiaircraft guns, scored better than 2-to-1 over the Germans' best fighters.

Polish fighter pilots escorted the Venturas in perfect weather to the attack on Flushing only 24 hours after the Dutch had been warned from London to move away from war industries working for the Nazis. A similar warning to the Belgians Monday had been followed by the Flying Fortress raid Tuesday on Antwerp. Thus the Allies appeared to be telegraphing their punches to save citizens of occupied lands.

Norwegian and Canadian squadrons escorted the Typhoon bombers to Abbeville. Venturas attacked Maupertus.

Some raiders did not even sight a single enemy plane.

The changes in locale of the night and day attacks gave at least a brief respite to the German Ruhr from which, it was reliably reported, more than one million persons had already been moved to "safer" areas northeast, east, and west, including thousands of workers from shattered factories.

The bombing of La Spezia in a "double-header" raid upon Germany and Italy added a dramatic new note to the aerial offensive by Britain's heavyweights.

Their return trip pummeling of the Italian naval base appeared of the greatest significance in the development of aerial war. The bombers flew a round trip of about 2500 miles, and lost not a single ship.

A communique declared that docks at La Spezia were bombed accurately and oil stores fired, and that on the outward bound flight the Torpedoing at least several dozen strong, had wrecked three acres of the radio location equipment plant at Friedrichshafen and severely damaged the Maybach Werke Motor Plant.

The new technique offered greater safety to attacking planes, since they do not have to return along a route already alerted where guns and enemy planes wait to attack. And it posed a great new worry to the Germans.

Nazi air raid detection systems presumably are organized to pick up raiders coming into the Reich or occupied territory from the west or north, but the Lancaster force, flying in a generally northern direction from La Spezia, came in behind these defenses, which had not been previously alerted by the inward passage of the bombers.

Aeronautical sources in London said the shuttle attack should have tremendous effect on the bomb-nervous Germans and Italians, particularly since not a plane was lost.

There was speculation but no official comment as to whether such Britain-North Africa hops might become a widely used pattern for Allied air assaults, with long-range United States planes also using the technique.

La Spezia, main Italian base in northwestern Italy, was last attacked June 5, when Flying Fortresses from North Africa showered explosives upon warships of Mussolini's cautious navy. The R. A. F. last made a heavy assault upon the port on April 18, flying from Britain in great force.

Mrs. Luce Tangles With Johnson

votes because she has no record to commend or condemn."

Johnson went on to predict that future historians "will not point, as the lady did today, the finger of guilt" at President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull "as being responsible for this great global war."

Mrs. Luce replied that the gentleman had misunderstood her, that she did not blame the President; that all she said was that Mr. Roosevelt was "on common ground with us in also having been an isolationist."

The novelty of the idea that President Roosevelt belonged in the same boat with Republican isolationists, a heartening thought on the Republican side, called for an immediate Democratic answer.

Up jumped Representative Bradley (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, who shouted: "I wonder if the gentlelady is aware of the fact that only 27 members of her own party voted for the lend-lease bill?"

Johnson called attention to the strength of Republican opposition to Neutrality Act repeal. He observed that he had supported the original neutrality legislation and declared that he had been "wrong" and that the President and Hull rightfully opposed it.

'Does the gentleman again misunderstand me to think I was defending Republican isolationism?" Mrs. Luce inquired. "I am against and was against the dunderheads on both sides of this aisle in that respect."

Johnson said he wanted to talk about neutrality legislation because "that has been injected into this camp . . ." He started to say "campaign," having in mind the 1944 elections. He recovered quickly and said "debate." Republicans roared. Johnson observed that they recognized Mrs. Luce's speech "as a part of a campaign."

Gives Instances

"The man (President Roosevelt) who sent the message of congratulation to Chamberlain on Munich was an isolationist," Mrs. Luce declared. "The man who said that America should stay out of war, in the face of the information that was piled up in his own State Department—I refer you to Mr. Hull's own white paper on the subject of the inevitability of war with Japan—was an isolationist."

For the last 40 years, she asserted, the United States has had no foreign policy.

The American habit of believing that "thinking about Europe and Asia could stop at the water's edge," she stated, encouraged the Axis powers "secretly" to pursue a foreign policy "in the justified belief that America would not take the trouble carefully to inspect" their "ultimate aims."

"Twice in our lifetime," she declared, "America's lack of a foreign policy has discouraged our friends, encouraged our enemies, weakened the forces of peace, fanned the flames of war, and plunged the world into catastrophe."

Not until after the Munich agreement, in 1937, did President Roosevelt slowly begin to shed his "blithe indifference to the oneness of the world and become "the world's outstanding interventionist," she asserted.

Lacking a foreign policy of his own, she went on, he adopted that of Great Britain, but not "forthrightly" until it was "thrust upon him at long last by Pearl Harbor."

Mrs. Luce coined two new words to go with the "globaloney" of her maiden House speech.

"Now it has been noted, I believe, that I am no proponent of 'globaloney.' But it has not been generously noted that I am equally a bitter enemy of globlindness, and a great friend of globalliances."

Collective security will have no meaning, she declared, "without the firm and clearly established military, as well as economic and spiritual, collaboration of the United States and the British commonwealth."

SALVAGE CAMPAIGN:
In the campaign to turn over useful materials to other industries for war purposes Capital Transit last year collected and sold 4,137,302 pounds of iron and steel, 157,885 pounds of non-ferrous metals and 16,367 pounds of rubber.

But that isn't the whole story. Not by considerable. New materials are difficult to obtain; sometimes it is just plain impossible or next door to impossible. So we are always on the alert to make the fullest use of what we have or can obtain. Inventions, short cuts, building up worn parts to make them as good as new, we turn to them all.

If we didn't do that; if our mechanical force wasn't looking all the time with eager eyes to make every resource count we would not be so able to take care of our million and a half passengers a day.

40% of Miners Still Are Out Of the Pits

was loaded with miners and forced them off. Frock said the pickets also overturned a car loaded with miners. The Associated Press described the town as seething with excitement with many local meetings being held.

At Logan, W. Va., State Policeman C. R. Dawson said that a group of men "pulled the crew off" a coal tipple, forcing it to shut down.

Ickes telegraphed the operators that "I still hope that the controversy may be speedily settled so that private operations of the mines may be resumed," but he acknowledged that developments "indicate that the Government will be compelled to continue custody and operation of the mines for a considerable period of time."

WLB later indicated annoyance with this interpretation by authorizing a spokesman to state, "There is no controversy between the coal operators and miners; it was settled by the board decision."

The board has asked President Roosevelt to use all the power available to the Government to enforce its decision which calls upon Lewis to sign a contract with the coal operators continuing most clauses of the previous contract with some additional benefits. Lewis denounced the board's decision and termed its proposed agreement an "infamous, yellow-dog contract."

The board believes, it was understood, that the President has ample sanctions to force compliance from the union.

Principal sanction in the President's hands is power to refuse to continue the dues checkoff from the country's 540,000 miners. Ickes stated to a press conference that he had no option but to continue the checkoff since it was provided under the old contract which WLB ordered extended.

The President also might seize the U. M. W.'s treasury and other property, including its headquarters at Fifteenth and I Streets Northwest, and place other restrictions on its operations.

Some Government officials believed President Roosevelt announced plans to ask Congress for power to draft men up to 65 years of age to cope with this specific situation.

The draft power undoubtedly could be used to order striking coal miners to return to their jobs as soldiers. In effect, this would automatically institute martail law in the mine areas with any miner staying away from his job becoming subject to court-martial.

Ickes commented that he sympathized with the coal operators who protested continued Government operation of the mines, but added: "They would have been more helpful if they had pointed out how you can make a private individual or group sign a contract."

WLB officials pointed out that President Roosevelt had forced Montgomery Ward and other large corporations to sign labor contracts at the direction of the board.

WLB officials were said to be disturbed by the implication that Ickes was reconciled to Lewis' terms.

Ickes revealed that he had asked Lewis that there be no deadline to condition the return to work.

A WLB official commented: "Lewis knows he cannot win a coal strike in July, but he may be able to win one in November, when the coal is needed to heat homes."

Asked if he recognized the deadline, Ickes replied: "That's like telling a man he has no right to be in jail when he is there. You have to recognize a fact."

Ickes was expected to object to any action which might precipitate another coal crisis and further endanger the country's supplies of solid fuels.

Eric A. Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, issued a statement that "grave dangers to our governmental and business system lurk in the background" of the present arrangement to operate the mines.

"I see in the present truce implications adverse not only to this particular industry, but to private business generally," Johnston said. "The public is entitled to a clear statement as to the significance of Government operation of the mines. Return of the properties to their owners at the earliest possible date without any action prejudicial to them or to private business generally should be definitely assured."

Curtin Will Seek Election Soon

Canberra, June 24 (INS).—Prime Minister John Curtin announced tonight that he will seek a dissolution of the Australian Parliament after the legislature has passed the pending supply bill.

Declaring that it is obvious that the present parliament is unworkable, Prime Minister Curtin said he is compelled to appeal to the higher authority of the people. A no-confidence motion against Prime Minister Curtin's labor government was defeated by 1 vote—27 to 26 yesterday.

tified as "Dr. Ford," lived in another.

The third had been rented to a man "in the Intelligence Service," she said, military or naval she was unable to say. All she could recall was that his business phone number was Republic 6700. Earlier, however, she declared; "the Secretary of the Bolivian Embassy" had considered taking one of the places himself, changing his mind only when his wife expressed disapproval.

In her own one-bedroom apartment, she testified, she lived with her husband, Charles E. Martin, a chief pharmacist in the Navy, and Dorothy Smitely, who had described herself as a penniless singer and violinist, Mrs. Martin said, and asked for a place to live, for which she would pay as soon as her Army husband sent some money.

"And did an ambassador ever come to your apartment?" Prosecutor Margolius asked.

"Yes. One ambassador, that I remember."

"Have any members of the diplomatic set been to your apartment?"

"Yes, they ave."

"And how many times did you leave Dorothy Smitely alone in the apartment with Dr. Salazar (identified earlier as "a South American diplomat) on his visits?"

Mrs. Martin couldn't recall whether she had left them alone, she said.

Later, answering Margolius' persistent questions, she said she had "acquaintances attached to the Chinese Embassy." "Two more ambassadors" visited her apartment, she added, "but I will not give their names." The prosecutor assured her he did not want them.

Asked whether she had ever been given money by these "acquaintances," Mrs. Martin aserted she received "presents."

"I got over 100 presents from diplomats at my wedding party," she said.

Her visits to the cocktail lounge of the Mayflower, where she "often" encountered her Chinese or South American diplomat friends, she declared were made "because I wanted a cocktail." And she was unable to remember whether she paid the cab fares for Dorothy Smitely on her "dates" to the Hamilton, Wardman Park, Roger Smith and Raleigh Hotels, she said.

Dorothy Smitely, a young, heavy-featured woman, took the stand briefly during the afternoon to substantiate the prosecution's claims that after working for three days in Carmen Beach Martin's dress shop, she had been invited into "the big money" by "selling her body" and accepting hotel dates.

She was followed by one of several FBI men who sat with the witnesses. In reply to a question from Margolius, he testified that Dorothy Smitely's first statement concerning her relationship with Carmen Beach Martin was made to the FBI on April 2, 1943. This, the prosecutor pointed out, "for all time" contradicted the previous testimony of a Copacabana pianist that Dorothy had vowed vengeance against Mrs. Martin in January and had informed the FBI in that month.

An acrimonious exchange between Defense Attorney Harry Whelan and Prosecutor Margolius during their concluding arguments before the all-male jury was cut short by Justice McGuire's suggestion that they put a stop to the "colloquy."

Highlighting the defense arguments, which sought to show that testimony by "a prostitute like Dorothy Smitely" could not be trusted, was a demand that "that fine, great organization, the FBI" arrest the "real white slaver," Whelan identified as Ariel Delatorre of New York.

"It is Ariel who is the white slaver," he shouted. "He lived on the money made by Hope Alonzo (another of the young girls who "worked" for Mrs. Martin) through the sale of her body. Get him for white slavery, and then tack on the charge of attempted murder!

"He drove a knife into Hope's breast, didn't he?" Whelan demanded, "and left a cut 11 inches long."

"Ariel is free, while the famous FBI looks away," he shrieked at the agents seated on the witness bench.

Referring to Charles E. Martin, who on Wednesday testified that his wife had not used their apartment as a call house for prostitutes, Whelan declared:

"I am sorry that Mr. Margolius criticized Mr. Martin. Because when we see men like that in the uniform of the U. S. Navy we know we will always be free. These men are chosen by the U. S. Navy to help provide the medicine our boys need in their fight.

"Why, I wish we had 100,000 more like him, and so would General MacArthur.

"Don't tell me that a man in that kind of uniform would permit prostitution right under his nose! Just because he lived with Carmen Beach for a few years without being married, Mr. Margolius says such things of him."

Martin is "right now" on a train to "do his duty for his country," Whelan stated, and "you can help us send him a telegram to tell him that he is still fighting for free mankind in this country!" he charged the 12 jurors.

Prosecutor Margolius rose at this point to address the jury.

"Send Martin that telegram," he said solemnly, "and 10,000 American soldiers will be in danger of contracting venereal disease through prostitution here in Washington!

"Carmen Beach is a prostitute! Or what was she doing with all those men while she was living with her husband? Drinking tea?"

Justice McGuire adjourned court without charging the jury. They will be instructed this morning, he said, warning in the meantime not to speak with anyone regarding the case or to read any newspapers, since they were not to be confined overnight.

65-Draft Idea Faces Trouble

for the oill after what they considered reliable word that the President would sign it, would be placed squarely on the spot by a veto.. These were grimly noncommittal on the draft proposal.

One Senate Republican, Senator Robertson of Wyoming, said the proposal to lift the draft age to 65 was "obviously a subterfuge reason for vetoing" the antistrike legislation.

"President Roosevelt, of course, has no idea that Congress would ever enact his proposal to amend the Selective Service Act and bring almost every adult in the country below 65 years of age under executive control. It is a slave labor proposal. And because it will never be enacted, the Nation would be left with no proposal to restrain strikes in war industries."

Senator Byrd meanwhile recalled that last March 1 he introduced a bill to give Selective Service boards power to draft strikers up to age of 65 in war plants "which, with some modifications, is in substance what the President now proposes." He told the Senate he had asked Chairman Reynolds of the Military Committee to call a meeting to consider the bill.

Byrd said that War Production Chief Donald Nelson, Secretary of the Navy Knox, Secretary of War Stimson, and Manpower Chairman McNutt had disapproved the measure. He said he "assumed" they will now withdraw their opposition in view of the President's statement.

Senate Delays Overtime Bill; Thousands Miss Pay

measure would amount to a "bill of attainder," or a legislative act inflicting punishment without judicial trial.

Members on both sides charged that there had been no trial of these men, and that no information was furnished any member about the records of the three accused employes.

Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, who brought in the conference report, told the Senate that the Senate conferees agreed to it after the Senate had once voted the amendment down, 69 to 0, because the House would not pass the bill without it.

He pointed out that the House had adopted the measure by a five-to-one majority, in a vote of 318 to 62. He declared the bill was so urgent it should be passed, and suggested that the men named in the amendment could sue to recover their salaries and thus be assured of a judicial hearing.

ALL GIANT STORES CLASSIFIED OPA-4

Regulations Rule We Must Sell at LOWEST CEILING PRICES!

This is in accordance with the Office of Price Administration regulations placing every retail food store in the country under one of four classifications, namely—OPA-1, OPA-2, OPA-3, OPA-4; the rating being based according to the company's annual sales volume. Each class prescribes a different set of ceiling prices, with those in the first three groups being permitted correspondingly higher ceiling price levels than OPA-4.

As GIANT STORES are all in the lowest ceiling price classification unit, OPA-4, the Office of Price Administration therefore rules that we must SELL at LOWEST PRICES.

Italian Capital

The immunity which Rome has enjoyed from bombing is an immunity that arises neither from its remoteness nor from the state of its defenses. It is now within easy bombing range of Allied bases in North Africa, and its defenses against aerial attack are probably no better than those of Milan, Genoa or Naples, if as good. In other words, if the Allies so desire Rome can be laid waste as London, Canterbury and other cities precious to the British, as Amsterdam, Belgrade, Guernica were laid waste by the Nazis and Fascists.

What has deterred the R. A. F. from attacking the Italian capital is sentiment, and a very noble sentiment at that. Rome, though Italian, is the priceless possession of all mankind, its churches and monuments and classical ruins are a link between the present and the past, its art treasures are the heritage of civilization. But Rome is something else. It is also the administrative center of the Italian kingdom, a factory town of some importance, a great railroad center, and a military camp. These circumstances make it a legitimate military target.

From R. A. F. headquarters in Britain the suggestion is now made that the immunity which Rome has enjoyed from bombing up to now may not be permanent. In other words, the possibility that Rome will be bombed can no longer be excluded. And the point is made that if the Italian government does not want Rome bombed, it can make sure that it will not be bombed—at least not by the Allies—by declaring it an open city. In other words, Mussolini cannot have it both ways. He cannot permit Rome to remain a military objective and be spared the bombing to which other military objectives, in Italy and elsewhere, have been subjected. He may not have very much time to decide which it shall be.

Mr. Vinson Intervenes

Director of Economic Stabilization Vinson has scotched a move to award an 8-cents-an-hour increase in the wages of nonoperating railway employes in disregard of the limitations imposed by the "Little Steel" formula. Mr. Vinson's action comes at a very critical stage of the fight to hold the line against inflationary wage increases. If the Administration had given way in this instance after resisting efforts of the miners to secure wage increases in disregard of the "Little Steel" formula, it would have laid itself open to charges of inconsistency and added to the resentment of the disaffected miners. It would also have encouraged the operating employes of the railroads to believe that their pending exorbitant demands for further wage increases would be acted upon favorably.

The effect upon the future earnings of the roads of an award that would have added more than 200 million dollars to the wages bill of nonoperating employes is, of course, highly important. However, the immediately much more important consideration is the effect upon the general stabilization program. As spokesmen for the roads have stated, the proposed increases would have done violence to the stabilization program, and, if they had become effective, would have irretrievably broken the inflation line. Still it would be rash to jump to the conclusion that the Vinson order spells a clean-cut victory for the anti-inflation forces. For that order does not preclude wage increases. On the contrary, it is strongly suspected that Mr. Vinson will suggest that time-and-a-half rates be paid for all work above 40 hours weekly—a proposal recently indorsed by the President. The railway employes are not covered by the 40-hour provision of the Fair Labor Standards Act, but are on a 48-hour basis. Consequently extension to them of the time-and-a-half provisions of the law would increase their earnings almost as much as the grant of an 8-cent increase in hourly wages.

We sincerely hope that the hold-the-line inflation order will not be evaded by patent subterfuges of this type. The wages of railway employes have been adjusted to take account of the length of the working week. Railway employes have been excluded from the operation of the 40-hour law for good reason. To change the basis for computing hourly remuneration now to allow for overtime could have but one purpose—to grant wage increases in excess of the "Little Steel" formula while ostensibly holding the line against such increases. To be sure, increases obtained by such means could not be cited as precedents for wage increases in industries now on a 40-hour basis. But labor leaders would be quick to interpret the concessions as a sign of weakness on the part of the Administration, an invitation to them to think up other smart devices for overstepping the inflation line while pretending to remain within bounds.

On Drafting Strikers

President Roosevelt has chosen a curious way of meeting the problem which John L. Lewis has left in the Government's front yard. He will ask Congress to amend the Selective Service Act by raising the age limit for "noncombatant military service" to 65 years. Apparently the President has in mind drafting miners or other warworkers who go out on strike for compulsory service in the jobs they have left. Indeed, the Government was getting ready to draft the striking miners now subject to the Selective Service Act when John L. Lewis called a retreat from the untenable position he had taken.

The need for some effective means of meeting open resistance to the war program is far beyond question. We do not believe, however, that this need can be met by simply raising the age limit for the induction of men into the military service. The Selective Service Act was passed to provide a systematic method of building an army. It was never contemplated that it should be used for the compulsory recruitment of coal miners.

The President did not make clear whether he was preparing to draft the striking miners of military age for service in the armed forces or in the mines. But he would probably have run into difficulties attempting to use the machinery of the Selective Service for either purpose. The act specifically provides that "the selection of men for training and service . . . shall be made in an impartial manner." Of course, miners' deferments on occupational grounds could have been canceled. But that would not have meant immediate induction of men with pre-Pearl Harbor children. At best the Selective Service machinery would afford only a crude method of dealing with a critical situation, and that fact would not be substantially changed by merely changing the age limit to 65.

If strikers are to be drafted for war jobs, new legislation is certainly needed. But that legislation ought to be aimed at the specific abuse which it is designed to correct. We believe that neither Congress nor the people will be impressed by the suggestion that an act passed to create an army may be properly used to punish recalcitrant miners. The honor of serving one's country on the field of battle should not be confused with the coercion of unpatriotic workmen into doing their duty.

The effect of the President's statement, therefore, is to center attention anew upon the Austin-Wadsworth bill, which would permit the Administration to select civilians for compulsory wartime service. Under this bill the President could, in case of strikes paralyzing an industry, call for volunteers or directly induct the required number of workmen for civilian service. There would be no reflection upon the armed services and no misuse of military legislation to recruit civilian workers.

Unfortunately, the Austin-Wadsworth bill appears to have been stymied. With a little encouragement from the White House, Congress would quickly revive it, but in any event considerable time will be required to study the measure, and then there is no assurance that Congress will pass it. In these circumstances we believe that a veto of the Connally-Smith bill, which may have been suggested in the President's statement, would be very unwise. Despite some shortcomings, this measure gives the President clear-cut authority to protect the national interest against the assaults of such would-be dictators as John L. Lewis. To discard that safeguard which Congress has already placed on his desk in favor of a mere hope that legislation of a different sort may be passed would involve a risk that no government, and particularly no commander in chief, should take in wartime.

Stigma By Ancestry

In upholding the authority of a military commander to enforce a curfew upon American citizens of Japanese ancestry, the Supreme Court has performed a duty for which it obviously had little relish. The decision was without precise precedent, as were the tragic circumstances on the West Coast after Pearl Harbor out of which the case arose. "Today is the first time, so far as I am aware," Justice Murphy noted in his separate concurring opinion, "that we have sustained a substantial restriction of the personal liberty of citizens of the United States based upon the accident of race or ancestry."

An American-born citizen of Japanese extraction, Gordon Kiyoshi Hirabayashi, was convicted of violating a pronouncement by Gen. J. L. De Witt requiring all persons of Japanese ancestry within a designated military area to remain in their homes between 8 p. m. and 6 a. m. This conviction was affirmed by the Supreme Court on the ground that, at the time the curfew was imposed, there was an actual danger of invasion justifying this protective measure. There was reason to suspect, the Court declared, that some persons of Japanese ancestry might give aid to our enemy and there was neither time nor opportunity, in the heat of the emergency, to sift the loyal from the disloyal through protracted hearings and investigation.

The Court carefully sheered away from any judgment on the validity of the Government's action in evacuating persons of Japanese ancestry from the West Coast and detaining them indefinitely in relocation centers. But that some of the justices entertain grave misgivings about this procedure seems apparent from the three concurring opinions submitted. Justice Douglas, for example, observed that, "Obedience to military orders is one thing. Whether an individual member of a group must be afforded at some stage an opportunity to show that, being loyal, he should be reclassified is a wholly different question."

The Chief Justice himself, moreover, in delivering the Court's opinion, had this to say: "Distinctions between citizens solely because of their ancestry are by their very nature odious to a free people whose institutions are founded upon the doctrine of equality." Perhaps the Court should, before too long, pass upon the constitutionality of our continuing discrimination against American citizens because of their racial heritage. The outright deprivation of civil right which we have visited upon these helpless, and, for the most part, no doubt, innocent, people may leave an ugly blot upon the pages of our history.

Reeducating Germans

More than most expositors of postwar blueprints Mr. Wallace feels that he suffers from the distortion of his ideas. He is popularly supposed, for instance, to favor the reeducation of the German people by foreign teachers who would be sent to Germany in the wake of the conquering armies. Perhaps the original suggestion was unclear because Mr. Wallace was only engaged in throwing out ideas for discussion. If that were the case, he has got his wish. The subject has aroused a vast amount of comment here and abroad, and the Vice President himself has now come along with an elaboration of the notion which he precipitated. The contribution occurs in a recent commencement address before the Connecticut College for Women at New London.

The Vice President's fresh contribution still leaves the program in Mr. Wallace's mind somewhat vague. Nowhere, to be sure, does he say explicitly that the Germans should be subjected to a new education by alien teachers. But he certainly seems to have in mind a liberalistic revamping of the German school system from the outside. Only by so doing does it seem to the Vice President that we can stave off World War III. In his view we helped ourselves to bring on World War II by failing to provide an incentive for education in Germany in democratic traditions. The nub of the Wallace thesis is this:

> The German postwar youth of World War II need not be forced to embrace either communism, a new type of totalitarianism, or even the particular type of democracy which we have in the United States. We shall not need to send school teachers from the United States into the German schools, but we can make sure that the liberal element in Germany has an opportunity to replace the Nazi schoolbooks and the Nazi methods of teaching.

The problem is how to guarantee such a result. Dr. Adolph B. Drucker, in a recent article in The Washington Post of June 12, feels that the object could be gained by two methods. First, the victors should provide—and presumably back up the provision by sanctions—against the deliberate indoctrination of national hatred and against the methodical falsification of historical facts and documentary evidence. Secondly, there should be much better protection of minorities—the acid test of liberation—than occurred after World War I. Possibly the Vice President would agree with this prescription. In reinsisting that the defeat of Germany this time must be complete, he might also agree that the best environment for the reeducation of Germany would be the control of Germany, as Sir Halford Mackinder puts it, between "strong embankments of power on either hand."

Whether the Germans will be susceptible to a new education based on democratic principles is a problem incapable of determination. The Vice President sees more regeneration through the medium of education than the facts seem to warrant. "The present false attitude of the German people toward war," in his opinion, "finds its roots in the Prussian school system, and especially in the type of militaristic education which became more prevalent as a reaction to defeat by Napoleon." This is not very convincing. In pre-Nazi Germany education was built on a foundation which included the Christian religion and Kantian ethics. If the military virtues were taught, they were based upon the knightly quality of chivalry. Certainly the anti-Christ and brutality of Hitlerism could not be charged to the school system. They have their roots elsewhere, and the best course of treatment which will cause them to wither and die is the denial of any further opportunity to Germany to mount aggression.

THE GIFT

This is the gift you brought,
Who came from the sea.
You brought one leaf from the tree
That stands forever alone
Where the water meets the shore of stone.
This is the gift you brought . . .
One empty shell,
White as the hour we knew,
Curved like forgotten grief.
The leaf was still green from the tree,
The shell was still warm from the sun,
As they lay in the palm of your hand . . .
A gift of love from the sea,

SARA VAN ALSTYNE ALLEN

Inflation Spiral

By Mark Sullivan

One Battle Won

IN THE ALARMING turns the coal strike has taken, the explosions that have accompanied it, many have forgotten what the fight was all about. Because they have forgotten that, they fail to see a highly important and hopeful aspect of the outcome. It was a key battle in the fight against inflation—and the battle was won.

The fight was about a demand by Mr. John L. Lewis for an increase in miners' wages—and the increase has been refused by the War Labor Board. It was about maintaining a ceiling over all wages which the War Labor Board had set up a year ago—and the ceiling has been maintained. It was about backing up President Roosevelt's "hold the line" stand against inflation—and the line has been held.

Mr. Lewis' wage demands were mainly two—a flat increase of $2 a day, and in addition "portal-to-portal" pay, that is, pay for the time spent by miners going from the mouth of the mine to the coal vein. (There were some minor demands also.)

TO THE demand for a $2-a-day increase, the War Labor Board a month ago said a flat no. The board said it had set up a year ago a standard of wage increases in all industries—the "Little Steel" formula. This formula says that workers should receive advances of 15 per cent above whatever had been the wage level on January 1, 1941, and no more. The board said that the wages already received by miners were slightly above the standard—hence the miners could not be given the $2-a-day increase Mr. Lewis demanded.

Next the board last week took up Mr. Lewis' other demand—for "portal-to-portal" pay. This, too, the board denied. They said it was in effect a demand for a straight wage increase by another name. And the board said: "Having found that the facts do not justify a general wage increase . . . the board does not propose to circumvent . . . by granting a general wage increase indirectly or by subterfuge under the guise of portal-to-portal pay . . ."

The Labor Board's firmness has the greater effect because it goes counter to the cynical expectation of Washington. Most of Washington thought that Mr. Lewis would get his increase—and get it by the method the board refused to practice, by subterfuge. Most of Washington felt Mr. Lewis had made two demands in the expectation of getting one, and that the one he would get would be the subterfuge one, the "portal-to-portal pay:" This cynicism was based on a past surrender of the Administration to Mr. Lewis, when he demanded a closed shop and the Administration awarded it to him, after saying it never would.

THIS TIME the Administration stood firm, and its firmness greatly strengthens the President's "hold the line" stand against inflation. It means that on one of two important fronts of the campaign against inflation, the labor front, the line is firm. This makes it easier to hold another front, the food front.

Had the War Labor Board granted Mr. Lewis' demand, there would have been immediate and adverse consequences, in the fields of both labor and food. Other labor leaders would instantly have demanded wage increases—and the board could not have refused them. The board's standard ceiling would have blown up utterly, its authority and prestige shattered. There would have been a runaway wave of wage increases.

This in turn would have started food prices upward. Farm leaders, in Congress and out, seeing labor getting higher wages, would have demanded higher prices for crops and would have got them. The inflation spiral would have moved upward rapidly—first a rise in wages, then a rise in crop prices, and repeat. Hence the importance of the War Labor Board's stand against higher wages.

Granted that winning one battle does not win a war, granted that the coal battle is not really won, but has only passed into a truce until October 1, granted that the whole of the campagin against inflation has other fronts besides wages and food prices—it is still accurate to say, that the campaign against inflation goes favorably. This inference is the more justified by a second incident. Another agency of government, Economic Director Fred M. Vinson, has disapproved an 8-cent-an-hour wage increase to some million employes in the railroad industry.

Zoot Suits

I am baffled by two aspects of this zoot-suit problem.

1. Mrs. Meyer, in her article last Sunday, said that the adolescents wearing them are mostly underprivileged boys, and that the suits cost about $100! These two facts somehow don't hang together.

2. In these days of saving material even of the cuffs from ordinary suits, how come that the WPB has not been aware of the enormous amounts of materials used for these zoot suits? PERPLEXED.

India And The War

By Paul Schubert

Wavell's Job

FIELD MARSHAL Wavell has been named Viceroy of India.

Few Britons attain the rank of field marshal. Few are named to the enormously powerful office of viceroy—an office which has literally regal rank, and for the assumption of which it is virtually mandatory that Wavell be raised to the peerage.

Thus Wavell's career becomes one of the outstanding achievements by an individual British subject during our generation—the sort of rise to the very top which spells "opportunity" to the Briton, combining as it does professional, political and social attainment.

Yet, for all Wavell's awareness of the honors heaped upon him, it's probable that he is far more aware of the problems heaped upon him.

Field Marshal Wavell is an Englishman of a type rather hard for Americans to understand and evaluate. To begin with, he is a professional soldier, from a family of soldiers, which means that from birth all his thinking has been dominated by the viewpoint, the code and the purposes of the army as an element in British life.

BUT MORE important than this, Wavell is a specialist in a world with which Americans have literally no contact—a world with which, however, most Britons reckon instinctively as a most important area of the globe—the world which begins with the Middle East and goes on into the fabulous empires of Asia . . . the world bordering on the Indian Ocean but backed up by the enormous land and population masses of Russia and China. A world teeming with people, and seething with a hundred political problems—problems of self-government, of exploitation, of colonization, of international relationships.

A world with which Britain has dealt, usually for mutual profit, since the era of exploration gave way to the era of trading companies, which in turn gave way to political responsibility.

Wavell the soldier becomes Viceroy of India.

This fact emphasizes several points. First, it points out what we already know—India's main problem, just now, is a military problem. Unless the war of the Far East is won, India will slip back a century and more, losing all the hard-won political gains through which Britain the exploiter has slowly been converted into Britain the partner . . . under a victorious Japan, India will discover that "politics" has no meaning in terms of self-government, and that exploitation, as seen by the Japanese mentality, has no trace of benevolence, and none of mutual profit.

A SOLDIER becomes Viceroy of India.

And yet in doing so, he ceases to be an active soldier, and becomes a man of politics.

The country whose rule he assumes (a rule tempered by the Indian parliamentary system, yet far more autocratic than we in this country envision when we speak of government) is tremendously important to the United Nations as a military, naval and aerial base for the war against Japan.

That's the second point: India has military importance, not only to the Indians, but to us.

And the third point is India's importance as a demonstration to the populations of the Far East—a practical demonstration that it is possible for the peoples of Europe, America and Asia to cooperate, both in military and political problems.

For much of the past 20 or 30 years, India has seemed like a demonstration of political futility. That has been the impression given to most Americans—and especially to millions of "native" inhabitants of the Far East, who have watched India to see what they might hope from the future of European domination.

The Indian problem is so complex that the chief lesson learned from all the dealings of the past quarter of a century, has been the fact that there is no easy solution to the Indian problem.

If this be futility, we might remember that the same period has taught us the same lesson about the European problem. The career of the League of Nations was a demonstration that it is not enough to have worthy motives and high-sounding aspirations—they will crash upon the practical politics of what the Rumanian peasant wants or how the unemployed German reacts to political demagoguery.

The old approach to the problems of India said: "East is east, and west is west, and never the twain shall meet."

The new approach realizes that we cannot shrug off the job in front of us quite so easily. East and west met long ago, whether they liked it or not—and we are being forced to adjust and adapt ourselves to each other.

Wavell becomes another link in the chain of adaptation. As a realist and a specialist, may he rise to greatness.

John L. Lewis

Every red-blooded American who realizes fully that we are engaged in the greatest and most vital struggle in our history, who realizes fully the avowed threat of our enemies to our sacred institutions and the dire consequences of defeat, feels the surge of righteous wrath in his veins when reading the news these days of John L. Lewis and the coal strike. This is especially true today on reading that blast furnaces have been shut down and the vital production of steel materially reduced as a consequence.

I note from the splendid poem reproduced on your front page the other day that our boys overseas feel this no less deeply.

Having given this matter careful consideration, I wish to recommend that John L. Lewis be tried for treason. I feel certain that a large majority of Americans will agree that he is chargeable under Article III of the Constitution with giving aid and comfort to the enemy. There is nothing in the Constitution which makes "malice aforethought" a prerequisite to trial for treason. If we have a fundamental law which makes acts such as those of Lewis heinous crimes against the country in time of war, that law should be invoked. I would like to see a Gallup poll on this question.

Granting the possibility of acquittal, the trial and the news emanating therefrom would have a salutary effect and would give pause to other labor leaders and to minority groups in general who continue to place their own selfish little purposes above the best interests of their country. And it would convince the remaining business-as-usual boys that this is really an all-out war which the American people are determined to win at any cost.

Concerning Fathers

I have six children all born before Pearl Harbor but I have always contended that a man is a father if he has a child regardless of when the child was born. If fathers are drafted they should be taken in orderly procedure within such limitations set up and administered by the proper authorities, regardless as to whether the man has one or six children. The time of birth should have no bearing on the situation because "A man is a father if he has a child." That is the law.

Laundry And War

The laundry situation in Washington is really ridiculous. As I see it, those to blame are:

1. The Administration for taking so many into the Government who formerly were laundry workers and are not fitted for office work.

2. The Laundry Association for not being on the job to take care of the influx of people who want to be clean.

3. The Army for not putting adequate laundries into the camps and expecting the Washington laundries to take the overflow. Sailors wash their own clothes, why can't privates do likewise.

4. The WMC for not freezing employes to their jobs the same as warworkers.

5. The apartment managers for not seeing that the building laundries are kept clean and in running order.

6. The OPA for stopping the manufacture of laundry equipment, both for home and commercial purposes. Likewise, the OPA for not insisting that paper napkins be used by all hotels, clubs and restaurants and that hotels cut down on towels and linen wherever possible.

7. Service people cannot afford to buy enough uniforms at the present price to wait 10 days to three weeks for laundry to be returned. WEARIED WIFE,

Pleasure Driving

Can we not bring out into open discussion the problem of the ban on so-called "pleasure" driving? Many of the people with whom I daily talk are in agreement that this ban is producing the same effect on the American people that the prohibition amendment produced, that is, it is making liars and cheats of many, it is making us all feel that some Gestapo agent is constantly spying on us.

There is no one in the United States today who is not well aware that we are engaged in a terrible war, and few indeed would take one drop of gasoline that is needed by our military services. It seems to me that petty regulations in this instance are defeating one of the purposes for which we fight. Allot us only so much gasoline as can be spared, however small an amount it may be, and then let each individual use it according to his own judgment.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Investigating Mayor LaGuardia

Q. You are Mayor of New York?

A. If I'm not, it's been a terrific illusion.

Q. Now, Mr. Mayor, are you aware of the purpose of this inquiry?

A. The purposes don't matter as long as the lighting and sound effects are all right.

Q. Are you a true friend of the people?

A. I am.

Q. Then why did you give out that statement that good coffee could be made out of leftover coffee grounds?

A. I admit I pulled a boner that time.

* * * *

Q. What about your radio hints to housewives on how to prepare leftovers? Are you a specialist in leftovers?

A. We Indians believe in using up everything.

* * * *

Q. Are you a member of the United States Marines?

A. Only by hearsay.

Q. Then why do you use the Marine theme song on your Sunday broadcast?

A. It gives me a grand entrance. I figure it is better than the entrance music for "This Is Our Enemy" and almost as good as the one for Fibber McGee and Molly.

Q. Have the Marines objected?

A. No, but the Army and Navy are jealous. They want me to ente to the tune of "Pass the Ammunition" and "Anchors Aweigh."

* * * *

Q. Who is the little boy who is always writing you letters complaining that his daddy is a heel?

A. His name isn't important; it's the spirit.

Q. A spirit in short pants?

A. I don't care how short his pants are if his letters are the right length.

* * * *

Q. Do you approve of bookmakers? Answer yes or no.

A. You know very well I can't answer that question yes or no. It starts me off on a regular tirade.

Q. Did you ever bet on a horse?

A. Not since the first Ranger showed up in an auto. We Redskins are no fools.

* * * *

Q. Why are you opposed to bingo?

A. I am opposed to games of chance.

Q. When the people of New York elected you were they not taking a chance?

A. Nonsense. I'm a gilt-edged investment.

* * * *

Q. What is your opinion of Tammany Hall? Beg pardon. I withdraw that question.

A. You'd better. We may be o the air.

(The inquiry continues up to a point where the mayor has missed two fires, four cornerstone layings and a reception in City Hall Park. He suddenly explodes.)

* * * *

Mayor. Enough of this. I demand to know exactly why I am being cross-examined here.

A. Well, we might as well break down and confess. All we want to find out is what the signals will be in the next test air-raid drill.

Mayor (excitedly). WHO DOESN'T?

Nurse's Aides

In expressing my own personal opinion as a registered nurse, I believe that I am voicing the sentiment of the other nurses in my professional status in the District, in my praise of the great work that is being done by the Red Cross Nurse's Aides in local hospitals.

Coming to the rescue at a time when she was so badly needed, she has not "grown weary in her well doing" but is constant in her services.

Her marked efficiency, her hearty cooperation with the staff nurses and the spirit in which she executes her duties is indeed commendable.

Labor Legislation

By Ernest K. Lindley

President Could Have Intervened

LINDLEY

SOME MEMBERS of the President's official family wanted him to set forth his own views on strike-curbing legislation before Congress took final action. Failing that, they would have liked to have him declare a preference for the original Connally bill.

They felt, and still feel, that if the President had intervened, he could have obtained a satisfactory bill, free of clauses not intimately related to the problem of curbing wartime strikes and free of any provision which might be interpreted as authorizing strikes called after due notice and a rank-and-file election.

The President allowed the opportunity to pass. His purpose was surely not to obtain a bill which he would have to veto or could readily veto. When final action was taken on the Hill, the handlers of the antistrike bill were confident that the President would approve the Senate-House compromise. And this was the expressed belief also of persons close to the President and usually well informed about the trend of his thinking on labor questions.

But within a few days, what had seemed almost a certainty began to hang in the balance. The change was attributable largely to the attitude of the more patriotic leaders of labor. Their objections were strenuous and backed by a certain amount of logic. Their representatives on the War Labor Board helped by reiterating the sanctity of the no-strike pledge, while they dissented from WLB's wage decision in the coal dispute.

INDIGNATION AGAINST labor union methods has been mounting for some years. The coal strike, and the imitative strikes in certain other war industries, brought it to a head—even though it was generally realized that John L. Lewis was particularly to blame and that most of the other leaders of labor did not condone or approve what he did.

On the question of strikes in war production industries, most of organized labor has stood behind the Government. If Lewis had won, or should win, special concessions by defying the Government, others would be encouraged to adopt his methods. Indeed, they have been copied on several occasions in the last few months. In some unions there are aggressive and less responsible elements who are on the constant lookout for a chance to force the hands of more conservative leaders, and even to oust them from their jobs.

The prevention of strikes in war industries is a special problem. It stands somewhat apart from the larger and longer problems of making unions more responsible, of shearing away excesses and regularizing the relationship of unions to industry and our national life. Legislation dealing with some of these larger matters would have come a long time ago, if the Administration had not objected to it persistently. In making its objections stick, the Administration had the help of the anti-labor extremists in Congress whose proposals were intended to destroy unionism, not to purify and regularize it.

IN TIME, almost certainly, there will be national legislation regulating the unions. It would be farsighted on the part of union leaders to get behind a moderate but effective legislative program. But most of them do not seem to have any greater political wisdom than Wall Street had in the early thirties.

The antistrike bill passed by Congress could not be considered, in any sense, an answer to this longer time need. But one longer range "reform" was tacked on it: the prohibition against union contributions to political parties. Whether it is desirable or not, this prohibition has no real bearing on the question of war time strikes.

For dealing with the special problem of curbing wartime strikes, the "work-or-fight" plan outlined by the President Wednesday is more stringent than the remedy proposed by Congress. The latter would reach union leaders and others who incite or encourage strikes with criminal penalties. Civil penalties are provided for strikes called without due notice and approval by a rank and file election.

Both involve going to the courts. How completely effective either would be in keeping men at work is open to question. And the provision for a breathing spell may be construed as vitiating the no-strike pledge which most of labor is honoring.

The draft machinery, on the other hand, can be put into motion instantly. It reaches the men who actually refuse to work. It is not very complimentary to the men in the armed services. But there are noncombatant jobs where ex-strikers doubtlessly can do useful work, such as digging ditches, on Army pay. And "work or fight" has an honorable precedent in the First World War.

Axis Forced To Hole Up?

A Hint From Stimson

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Military leaders suggested yesterday that the heavy Allied air attacks on German industrial centers and the threat of an invasion of Europe may have smashed enemy plans for a summer offensive in Russia and forced the Axis onto the defensive.

Secretary of War Stimson disclosed information indicating the war may have taken this vital turn, which would mean that the Axis has given up hope of victory.

Stimson termed the continuing lull on the Russian front "extraordinary" in view of the fact that the weather for some time now has been favorable for the long-expected Nazi summer offensive against the Soviets.

Nazi Fighter

He also reported that recent bombing raids on western Germany had been opposed by strong forces of fighter planes and said this indicated that the enemy has had to concentrate large numbers of such planes to protect military and industrial installations on the home front.

"It is probable that many of these planes were withdrawn from the Eastern Front, which may be one reason why Germany has not yet launched a summer offensive in Russia," Stimson added.

The War Secretary also reported that there were indications the Germans are moving large forces of troops into France and are reinforcing the Fascist Army in Italy.

It is reported that as many as 10 to 12 divisions have been moved into France and that several divisions have been sent to Italy, Stimson said. There had been considerable speculation that the Nazis were preparing to abandon the Fascists—rumors which it now appears were false.

Offensive May Be Off

The War Secretary pointed out that these troops need not have been withdrawn from the Russian Front, where the Axis has some 200 divisions, but could have been taken from reserves in central Germany.

The reported move, nevertheless, strengthens the belief that Germany may have decided against a last desperate offensive designed to knock Russia out of the war, for it means that many fewer troops for replacements in any gigantic do-or-die struggle with the Red army this summer.

As the Axis' weakness is in air power, rather than land forces, the withdrawal of a sizable portion of the Luftwaffe from the East to the West is the most significant indication that the turning point in the war may have been reached.

For if German military leaders have concluded that they have not the air strength for another great offensive, coupled with the need for combatting an aerial and perhaps a land offensive in the West, it means that they have given up hope for victory. Their only remaining hope would be to hold out defensively in the prospects of a compromise peace.

The Gallup Poll

10% of People in U. S., England and Canada Believe Nazis Will Be Beaten by End of Year

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 24—A favorite pastime in many nations today is guessing when the war will come to an end.

Even members of Congress have recently taken a fling at it in a poll conducted by Representative Earl Wilson, Republican, of Indiana.

While no one, not even military authorities, can do much more than guess, millions of people may be planning their lives with reference to their own views on how long the war will last.

The Institute has just received results of polls completed in the past few days in Canada and Britain on the length of the war, and has completed tabulations of its own most recent survey in which a cross-section of the American voting population was asked this question:

"How much longer do you think the war with Germany will last? With Japan?"

A comparison of opinion in three countries with that of Congressmen reveals that the United States Congress is most optimistic about the war's ending by the end of this year.

Grouping opinion in Canada, Britain, and America, roughly one person in every ten believes the war with Germany will be over before the first of the year, with people in England slightly more optimistic than those here or in Canada.

The actual percentage of Congressmen who, in Representative Wilson's poll, think the war will be over before January, is 16 per cent. In Britain the public's vote is 14 per cent; in Canada, 9 per cent; in the United States, 7 per cent.

People in the United States and in Canada, and members of Congress are in close agreement on their guesses as to when the war in Europe will end, and as to when the war in the Pacific area will end. On the war in Europe the median average of all groups is that the war will end approximately one year from now, in the Pacific area two years from now.

Obviously guesses on the length of the war connot be taken too seriously. Whether you are a Congressman, in a position to obtain special information, or a farmer in Iowa, or a fur-trapper in Canada, you are likely to arrive at about the same guess—that the war with Germany will continue for another year, and the war with Japan for another two years.

However, in the United States the public is taking a progressively less optimistic view of the war against Japan than it did last November. At that time as many as 40 per cent thought the war with Japan would come to an end within a year. Today only about one person in four look for an end to hostilities in the Orient in that short a time.

Tax Queries Answered

Treasury Explains Law

Below are additional questions and answers explanatory of the withholding tax which goes into effect July 1:

Q. Is the withholding tax an additional tax?

A. No. The withholding tax is merely an easier way of paying your regular annual income tax on a prepayment pay-as-you-go basis.

Q. I am a married man with one child and am now putting 10 per cent of my pay in war bonds and 5 per cent, after subtracting withholding exemption, for the Victory tax. How can I pay the additional 20 per cent withholding tax on top of that 15 per cent and still have enough to live on?

A. In the first place your 20 per cent withholding tax includes your Victory tax. If you are married and have one child, your exemptions will bring your tax down to approximately 8 per cent. For instance, if your salary or wage is $50 per week, your withholding tax will be approximately $4 per week, and instead of paying an annual income tax of approximately $212 in a lump sum, you are paying it at the rate of $4 weekly.

Refund on Excess

Q. Suppose when I make my return next March 1, I find my employer has withheld more than enough money to cover my tax. Will the excess be refunded to me?

A. It will either be refunded to you or credited against other income taxes due from you.

Q. Suppose my employer withholds tax from my wages, but does not turn it over to the Government. What protection have I?

A. The employer is liable for the payment of the tax and must furnish the employe with a written statement showing the amount of tax deducted. Penalties are imposed upon employers for failure to make and file returns or pay the tax within the time prescribed by law. The employe is amply protected.

Q. Do I have to wait until the end of January to know how much of my wages my employer holds out?

A. Yes, for the official notice or receipt unless your services with your employer are terminated before the end of the calendar year.

Loss of Receipt

Q. What happens if the receipt the employer gives me gets lost or destroyed?

A. You should make application to your employer for a copy of the receipt.

Q. Does it make any difference if I change jobs several times during the year?

A. No. Each employer is required to withhold the tax from wage payments made to you.

Q. What advantages are there to me in this withholding?

A. You will be paying on your income and Victory tax as you receive your wages.

CAP Spots 150 Subs

Civilian Fliers' War Record Listed

By International News Service

The Civil Air Patrol was officially credited last night with having spotted 150 enemy submarines, and by means of a 20-cent bombsight was said to have even sent some to the bottom without bothering to call for outside help.

Formed a week before Pearl Harbor, the CAP was revealed in an Office of War Information survey to have amassed more airplanes now than the Army Air Corps had early in 1940 and to have flown 20 million miles in behind-the-lines war work.

CAP fliers not only have done heroic feats in patrolling coasts against submarines and aiding in off-shore rescues, the OWI said, but they have carried out valuable inland courier missions and played important parts in rescue work in floods and tornado disasters.

75,000 Volunteer Fliers

The patrol now includes approximately 75,000 volunteer airmen from 30 to more than 50 years of age, and is the only civilian organization allowed to wear United States insignia. It was taken over by the War Department from the Office of Civilian Defense on April 29.

Thirty fliers killed and 73 planes lost are CAP casualties to date, OWI said.

CAP members receive $8 a day plus $5 to $56 an hour for operation, maintenance and depreciation of their planes, depending upon their size and horsepower. One CAP flyer, Capt. Robert E. Thomas, a Baltimore broker, figured that after 40,000 miles of flying on a six-months tour of duty that he had only $56 left when all expenses had been paid—leaving him little less than $10 a month.

Organized in All States

The CAP is organized in each of the 48 States. Mechanics, nurses, radio operators, observers, photographers and doctors have joined the pilots in ground crew training which fits each local unit to perform any mission light planes can fly.

The inland squadron members carry on their regular jobs and serve in their spare time.

The OWI said:

"Flying their own planes, using their own brains, initiative, equipment and money, together with gradually enlarged Federal grants, they have built up many coastal bases from Maine to Mexico."

Inland, their courier routes between Army posts and between industrial plants require the services of several hundred planes daily and a large number of pilots, ground mechanics, and radio operators.

Their volunteer missions search for lost planes, maintain forest fire patrols, and fly emergency relief to flood and disaster areas.

They furnish men and women pilots to the Army Transport Command and carry on a large-scale training program, all of which, the OWI said, frees thousands of Army planes and pilots for more urgent assignments.

NYA Funds Trimmed From Bill Committee Reports to Senate

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Congress' see-saw battle over the National Youth Administration again turned against the agency yesterday as the Senate Appropriations Committee sent to the Senate floor a bill trimmed of all NYA funds except the three million dollars the House allowed for liquidation.

The Appropriations Committee's decision to cut out a proposed $40,800,000 fund for NYA work was registered by a one-vote margin, 13 to 12, reversing the recommendation of a subcommittee headed by Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada.

Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, acting Appropiations chairman, announcing that he hoped to bring the money bill up for Senate action today said he hoped the NYA funds would be left out, declaring the agency's contribution to the war effort was not worth "two bits"

Mead Approves NYA

In opposition to that stand, Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York, said that he plans to seek restoration of a "streamlined" appropriation for NYA totaling about 40 million dollars. This, he said, would limit its work to training youth for jobs in war industry, and delete money for college students, and for such special services as training older workers.

While dropping the NYA fund, the full committee approved 45 million dollars for the Public Health Service's nurse training fund, in place of $3,500,000 allowed by the House. Senator McCarran said that the fund would provide for training an estimated 35,000 nurses.

NLRB Proviso Out

McCarran said that the committee also voted 14 to 4 to eliminate from the bill a proviso, written by the House, designed to prevent the National Labor Relations Board from returning a decision in its case against the Kaiser Shipyards contract with the A. F. of L.

As presented to the Senate the funds bill totals $1,139,022,810, an increase of nearly 53 million over the House bill, for the Labor Department, Federal Security Agency, NLRB, U. S. Eemployes Compensation Commission, National Mediation Board, Railroad Retirement Board and War Manpower Commission.

Among the increases, McCarran said, was five million dollars for the U. S. Employment Service offices under the War Manpower Commission.

Axis Points to Detroit Riots As Evidence of U. S. Distress

New York, June 24 (AP).—The Nazi-controlled Vichy radio asserted today that Detroit's race riots were symptomatic of "the internal disorganization of a country torn by social injustice, race hatreds, regional disputes, the violence of an irritated proletariat and the gangsterism of a capitalistic police."

The broadcast, recorded by C. B. S., declared the rioting to be both a handicap to war production and an indication of the scope of what the radio said was "the moral and social crisis in the United States."

"First of all it evidences the small interest a great part of the American population shows in the war," the radio commented" . . . In the present state the United States do not seem very justified in their ambition of Americanizing the world and of making the twentieth century an American century. Before the start of the war, President Roosevelt already loved to preach to Europe, while at the same time fostering the divisions profitable to his imperialistic policy."

C. B. S. also recorded a Berlin broadcast directed to Asia which said in part:

"The disturbances in Detroit have now come to an end, owing to the intervention of the troops which Roosevelt dispatched to the scene. There is no doubt about the fact that the problem of capital and labor cannot be solved by the present rulers of the United States."

A Rome broadcast directed to Spain and recorded by C. B. S., quoted what was described as a dispatch from Buenos Aires:

"According to reports received here, American mechanized troops have succeeded in reestablishing order in Detroit. The number of dead and wounded is far in excess of the figures previously anticipated. It is officially confirmed that the number of victims in the riot between whites and Negroes amounts to 30 dead and more than 800 wounded. The Negroes are doing important work, but they are being terrorized and they don't have any right to make demands."

Detroit Restrictions Eased As City Swings Back to Normal

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 24.—Detroit approached normalcy today and Gov. Harry F. Kelly modified emergency restrictions including a general curfew and liquor ban imposed Monday as a means of curbing race rioting that brought death to more than 30 persons and injury to nearly 800.

All restriction were lifted in the outlying metropolitan areas of Macomb and Oakland Counties, while in Wayne County (Detroit) tonight's curfew was set for midnight ,instead of 10 p. m., liquor sale by the glass was permitted from 7 a. m. to 10 p. m., and places of amusement were allowed to remain open until 11 p. m. Since Monday all theaters had been forced to close at 9 p. m.

Mayor Edward J. Jeffries, jr., described Wednesday night as "even quieter than normal" and advised proprietors of business establishments in the "paradise valley" Negro section that they might safely reopen their stores, promising "ample police protection."

A force of 3800 Federal troops under command of Brig. Gen. William E. Guthner of the Sixth Service Command continued to patrol city streets and, according to General Guthner, will remain at least until the weekend.

Both here and in Washington measures were taken to investigate causes of the bitter 24-hours of mob fighting that subsided Monday night on arrival of the military.

The total of 90-day sentences imposed on rioters reached 152 by this afternoon in Recorder's Court—126 of them Negroes and 26 white. Many of both races were under bonds ranging up to $2500 pending trial.

Young Republicans To Urge Dewey For President

Omaha, June 23 (AP).—The World-Herald said today that John Samson, Omaha, president of the Nebraska Young Republican organization, announced today a Midwest conference is planned within the next 30 days to start a movement for New York's Gov. Thomas E. Dewey for the Republican nomination for President.

According to the newspaper Samson declared he discussed the proposal for a young Republicans' conference last week in Kansas City with William Jones, Olathe, Kans., president of the Kansas Young Republicans, and that since then it was decided by correspondence to contact Dewey men among Republicans in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Iowa, Nebraska and probably North and South Dakota to get a meeting date that will best suit them.

British Prelate Voices Approval Of Bombing Nazis

London, June 25 (AP).—Approval of the Allied strategy of bombing Germany's industrial cities was voiced by the Archbishop of York today in a diocesan leaflet, in which he replied to his countrymen who have protested against the devastating attacks.

"However much we deplore the sufferings of the civilian population and the destruction of their homes, we must continue to use our superiority in the air as a means of ending the war as speedily as possible," the archbishop declared.

"It is a lesser evil to bomb warloving Germany than to sacrifice the lives of thousands of our own fellow countrymen who long for peace and to delay the hour of liberation for millions now held in slavery."

Germans Adopt Dark Yellow for Army Uniforms

New York, June 24 (AP).—Color of the German army's uniforms and motorized equipment will be changed from gray to a dark yellow, according to D. N. B. (German news agency) dispatch by the Berlin radio and reported by United States Government monitors to the Office of War Information.

D. N. B. said the new color will be "similar to the former African color," presumably that used by the defeated African Corps, and that the change had been decided upon "as a result of experience."

Mystery of the Drifting Leg Solved by Sleuth—and Shoe

By the Associated Press

Mineola, N. Y., June 24.—The mystery of the human leg and its sodden shoe, washed up June 1 at the Sands Point Beach Club on Long Island Sound, was solved today through the painstaking investigation of Police Lieut. Adam Yulch.

Surgeons said the leg appeared to have been snapped off by a powerful propeller. Police made a cast of it which revealed clearly a peculiarity of overlapping toes.

With these facts and the small, black shoe, Lieutenant Yulch took over. He boarded a train for Endicott, N. Y., home of the Endicott-Johnson Shoe Corp. It wasn't their shoe, but they referred him to Boston, center of a large shoe manufacturing area.

For five days he tramped through shoe factories. Finally C. B. Allen, president of the Allen-Squires Shoe Co., identified the shoe as one made by his firm. At the company's Spencer, Mass., factory, the shoe was subjected to tests which established it as one of a type made a year ago and shipped to jobbers throughout the country. Its retail price was $5. Its size was 6-D.

With a list of 20 jobbers, Yulch returned to New York and chose the only one in the Metropolitan area—Sobel Bros., Inc. There he obtained a list of their retailers. Yulch visited 10 stores in Brooklyn and Manhattan without success.

Three days ago he visited the small waterfront store of Joseph Berg. Berg recognized it as a type used particularly by tugboat men and referred him to the Brooklyn store of Jose Fernandez.

There the trail ended. "That belonged to my brother-in-law, Francisco Lopez," Fernandez said. "I sold it to him." And he filled in the story.

Lopez was an oiler on a tugboat which sank after a collision in the East River May 23, Fernandez said. Three men were reported missing but the body of Lopez never was recovered.

Fernandez added that Lopez had overlapping toes.

U. S. Land Forces Equal Australian

Canberra, Australia, June 24 (AP).—Prime Minister John Curtin, in a statement today, disclosed that American land forces in the southwest Pacific now equal in number the Australian forces there and that United States air squadrons exceed the numerical strength of the Royal Australian Air Force.

He also declared "the battle for Australia assuredly has been won."

"Someday," he added, "the people will be told how close a call we had in New Guinea."

Government Girl Funds Continue; New Total $479.50

Dollar contributions from Federal workers, six weeks after the close of the campaign and the launching of two Government Girl warplanes in an impressive Capital ceremony, continue to come in intermittently, Mildred Steadman, employe of the United States Treasury, said yesterday.

Initiated by Jerry Klutz, Post columnist, who took a cue from a letter written him by Miss Agnes Richardy, an employe of the Veterans' Administration, the original campaign was planned to last for three weeks and to secure $50,000 to purchase a warplane.

Contributions grew—at $1 each—to $158,000, considerably more than three times the amount originally set. Two warplanes fully equipped were purchased and turned over to the Army and Navy.

The funds listed below, earmarked by the Treasury, will also go into a fund for purchasing warplanes, Miss Steadman said:

Navy Department	$323.50
War Department	37.00
Capitol employes	13.00
Petroleum Adm. for War	2.00
Federal Housing Authority	17.00
Federal Works Agency	47.00

'Stage Door Canteen' Is A Super-Entertainment

"STAGE DOOR CANTEEN." United Artists presents the Sol Lesser picturization of a story by Delmer Daves, featuring Cheryl Walker, William Terry, Marjorie Riordan, Lon McCallister, Margaret Early, Michael Harrison, Dorothea Kent, Fred Brady, Marion Shockley and Patrick O'Moore, with scores of the foremost stars of stage and screen and the Count Basie, Xavier Cugat, Benny Goodman, Kay Kyser, Guy Lombardo and Freddie Martin orchestras. Directed by Frank Borzage. At Loew's Palace.

DEVISED FOR THE DUAL PURPOSE of supplying the theater-going public with super-stellar entertainment and the American Theater Wing with the sinews of its war effort, "Stage Door Canteen," which yesterday opened its first Washington engagement on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, assuredly achieves its first objective and, by that token, will its second.

In producing this cross-cut of three typical nights in New York's original Stage Door Canteen, Sol Lesser dwarfed every previous attempt in any quarter, stage or screen, to present an "all-star revue." The joint auspices under which the picture was made, of course, made available to him practically every "name" in every branch of the theater—each, by the very nature of the story, given his or her moment in the action, as a tender little love story weaves its way gently through the hurly-burly of the canteen in full operation. It is, patently, something impossible of detailed review.

Except for the thread of narrative that holds the whole expansive business together, "Stage Door Canteen" would be a glorified and gargantuan variety show, with such stars as Katharine Cornell, Lynn Fontanne, Katharine Hepburn, Tallulah Bankhead, Georgie Jessel, Ed Wynn, Allen Jenkins, Gypsy Rose Lee, Ray Bolger and hosts of others as its headliners and Benny Goodman, Xavier Cugat, Kay Kyser, Guy Lombardo, Freddie Martin and Count Basie present with their orchestras to lend a rich and rollicking musical background for the activities of a unique institution.

Despite the constant swirl of motion and the amazing kaleidoscope of specialties and divertissements, the picture manages its moments of poignance and a clutch in the throat through the unobtrusive efforts of a "story cast" of comparative unknowns. Romantic interest centers in Cheryl Walker and William Terry, as Eileen and "Dakota" Ed Smith, the soldier who left his heart with her at the stage door canteen, if you remember the song. Miss Walker's hostess-companions at the canteen are smartly and amusingly played by Marjorie Riordan, Margaret Early and Dorothea Kent, with "Dakota's" companions in arms as efficiently and contrastingly portrayed by Lon McCallister, as "California;" Michael Harrison, as "Texas," and Fred Brady, as "Jersey." Each lad seeks his own particular "escape" and each finds it with the girl who "hostesses" him for three short nights before embarkation. It is vastly to this cast's credit that it is able to project itself through the make of stellar distinction by which it is surrounded.

Great Stars Catch the Spirit

Since most of the theatrical luminaries pictured in the film are only repeating for the cameras what they have done times without number for the entertainment of the United Nations servicemen, it is not surprising that they fit perfectly into the informality and spirit of camaraderie and merriment that strike the keynote of the picture.

Katharine Cornell finds herself momentarily playing the balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet," while acting as a counter girl; Georgie Jessel holds numerous telephone conversations with "Momma;" Ed Wynn makes the most ridiculous of hat-check boys and Gypsy Rose Lee contributes probably the most restrained "strip-tease" in which she ever will be seen. Judith Anderson strolls around among the guests, dropping the right word at the right time; Ethel Waters sings "Quicksands" as only she could; Gracie Fields, Ethel Merman, Yehudi Menuhin, Lanny Ross, Kenny Baker sing and play; Ray Bolger dances; the Misses Hepburn and Bankhead have brief spots of "drama" helpful to the plot, etc., etc., etc. Just to give you a sketchy idea.

As I was saying, "Stage Door Canteen" is a picture that cannot be adequately reviewed. Neither is it one that can be judiciously missed by any discriminating amusement-seeker.

Big as the major feature is, it is not alone on the new bill at the Palace. Columbia presents a novel "America Speaks" release in "Men Working Together," depicting the unity of purpose among our armed and industrial forces. The newsreel is unusually complete and interesting, devoting a considerable "clip" to the fall and occupation of Pantelleria.

The only drawback to complete enjoyment at the Palace this week will be trying to get in!

New Stage Bill at the Capitol

An enthusiastic audience yesterday morning greeted the opening of a second week of "Presenting Lily Mars" at the Capitol, with an entirely new stage bill added.

Headliners on the stage for the coming week are "The Merry Macs," Jud, Ted, and Joe McMichael and Mary Lou Cooke, whose most warmly applauded song was a new one, premiered for yesterday's audience: "Mr. Beebe." Dedicated to no less a personage than Lucius himself, the song celebrates his sartorial elegance, with satirical pantomime, at which the Merry Macs are so adept, elaborating their musical remarks.

The bill is opened by Mariana Sarrica, young pianist, who is billed simply as Mariana. She played Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C Sharp," Grieg's Concerto for Piano, encoring with "The Man I Love." Mariana has been heard in Washington once before, with Grace Moore several years ago at Constitution Hall. The talented young pianist is the only American ever to win the "King Albert Gold Medal." And, what's more, she got it when she was only sixteen.

From the "Big Tops"

The comedy team, The Iwanows., who follow Mariana, are making their first appealance on a local stage. Until this year they toured with Ringling Brothers. They seemed very much at home out of the sawdust ring. Their act is well adapted to the greater intimacy of the stage.

Buster West and Lucille Paige close the show with several comedy dances, including one by Lucille which Buster announces as "out of the Folies Bergere," and a contortionist exhibition by Buster which goes on until he asks the audience "Whaddye want, a fracture?" Yesterday's audience solicitously stopped the act with applause at that point.

Richard Buckley is master of ceremonies and has a couple of audience-participation acts in which he takes his stooges from the house. He doesn't lure 'em up, he orders them and makes them like it.

On the screen Judy Garland continues as Booth Tarkington's heroine, Lidy Mars, a highly satisfactory arrangement. That would refer both to the film's continuance and to the young star's performance. Judy, grown up, is a refreshingly joyous singer and a personality of great appeal. In the story of an ambitious, stage-struck kid who has the courage, the stick-to-it-iveness and the imagination to make good in spite of all odds, she acquits herself most creditably.

That Poster Did It

VIVIAN AUSTIN

.he bathing-suit model, whose poster appearance across the land in an underwater kissing scene won her a film contract. "Miss Hollywood" for four successive years and the possessor of 18 swimming medals, the curvaceous Miss Austin will be seen on the screen first in "Fired Wife."

Romantic Interest in All-Star Film

WILLIAM TERRY AND CHERYL WALKER as "Dakota" and Eileen, the "love interest," in "Stage Door Canteen," which opened yesterday on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. More important than the picture's essay at "plot," however, is the presence in the canteen scenes of perhaps the greatest assemblage of stars of both stage and screen ever recruited for a single cinema enterprise. They put on a great show, plot or no plot.

HEDDA HOPPER

So He Took the Script

Hollywood, Calif., June 24.—Jack Wilson, producer of "Blithe Spirit," finally got what he came out for—Dodie Smith's new play, "Lovers and Friends." It will star Katharine Cornell next fall. He hopes to take Herbert Marshall back to play opposite Miss Cornell, but Marshall has so many commitments I doubt that he can get away. Wilson needed a young girl, and Susan Hayward would have been thrilled if she could have heard the wonderful things George Cukor said about her and her acting. Maybe Paramount had better get onto what it has in the little girl, or she'll be snatched to Broadway . . . Jean Gabin leaves to join the Fighting French next week . . . Billy Wilder's been trying to get Jimmy Cagney to star in "Double Indemnity." It's a perfect Cagney part. He was even willing to make a deal and allow his brother William to produce it. But I guess Jimmy Cagney doesn't care to make any except his own pictures, because word reached Wilder from Marthas Vineyard, where Jimmy's vacationing, to please stop bothering him.

KATHARINE CORNELL

"Women at War"

Col. Oveta Hobby of the WAACs, arrives from Des Moines, Iowa, to be Technicolored in "Women at War" . . . Elmer Davis picked on the wrong guy when he sideswiped at Walter Wanger. Walter said that film production should be left to the industry and Government-sponsored propaganda films would serve no purpose other than to empty theaters, and he was right. Frank Capra's "Prelude to War," made for servicemen, has laid a big egg in commercial theaters. That good-looking Philip Dorn has to shave his head for "Conflict." It's a shame to do that to a good-looking man . . . Victor Borge's description of Hollywood: "The place where a man doesn't carve a career—he chisels it"

What a Friend

Arch Oboler wants plenty of jobs for actors. His first picture for RKO, "An American Story," has five different sequences and each calls for a new and separate cast . . . RKO's been making the "Falcon" pictures for years. Today Michael Arlen got around for his first look at its latest, "The Falcon in Danger." But he's received credit for writing the whole series . . . Alan Carney made a hit with the Coast Guard lads. Now they're renaming one of their blimps for him . . . Ted Howard of the Rio Bomba New York night club is here with a wad of dough willing to pay Mae West, Judy Garland or Eleanor Powell $5000 a week. So far he hasn't even talked to them . . . Columbia wanted Alex Templeton to be Hazel Scott's piano partner in her next flicker. But Alex is off on a concert tour, which starts in Washington, D. C. . . . Johnny Gart tells of the movie queen who has a playboy eating out of her hand. He pawned her engagement ring to pay for the dinner.

Round the Town

The Charlie Brackets' luncheon for Dorothy Stickney and husband, Howard Lindsay, brought out the Goldwyns, Ernst Lubitsch, George Cukor, Jack Wilson, Zoe Akin—in fact, the clan. The Lindsays of "Life With Father" fame, had made another engagement and didn't arrive until 3 p. m., but, gosh, they're sweet people . . . Dave Rose tossed a surprise birthday party for Gene De Paul, composer of "Cow Cow Boogie," with Mickey Rooney, Hank Potters, Jack Cummings, lots of musical lights, but not Judy Garland. She was present only on the living room wall of Dave's house.

Could Be

When Dudley Nichols, who turned director for "Government Girl," with Olivia de Havilland, finishes it, I wonder if he won't be as eager to retire into a writer's job as was Nunnally Johnson . . . M-G-M used to entertain our visiting firemen. Lately that honor's been going to Warners. They whipped up a luncheon for William Beveridge and his wife, and when the Wallaces of Reader's Digest were quietly vacationing in Pasadena they were invited to the studio by Whitney Bolton, lunched with Ingrid Bergman and Gary Cooper—then went through the technical end of the studio. They were so impressed, you may be reading many favorable stories on movies in that magazine from now on . . . Harry Joe Brown wants Ann Corio to "Sleep It Off" on Broadway so he can keep the movie patrons wide awake when he puts it on the screen later . . . Bob Howard, colored comic of "Early to Bed," is wanted by Metro so it can have its own Rochester.

In Washington they're asking if a Hollywood "yes man" is part of an essential industry. Answer is yes . . . Ruth Selwyn had a gathering of the clans to celebrate the birthday of her fiance, John Rutherford. Gosh, what a mob!

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Bulletins

New York, June 24.

Some war reporters who recently returned from Africa tell of one of their colleagues who was assigned by Look magazine to write an article about General Montgomery. He wrote the piece and then submitted it to the general for approval. Montgomery read it carefully, crossed out a few words and sentences on each page and submitted his own lines. "I think this is more accurate," the general explained, at each correction . . . The reporter then sent the corrected article to the magazine. The British censors passed it, after eliminating every line Montgomery had written—because they deemed them censorable.

RUTH GORDON

Paul Kern, who was fired by LaGuardia as civil service commissioner, will be subpoenaed to air his grievances before the New York City Council investigation of the LaGuardia regime at City Hall . . . Wendell Willkie was offered a fee in the Schneiderman case, which he won before the United States Supreme Court, but he refused it . . . "Front 13," the night club organized for the benefit of Russian War Relief, at 13 West Fifty-sixth, burned down. The sponsors collected $6000 insurance. Instead of reopening the place, they contributed the $6000 to Russian War Relief . . . Mike Cowles will appear before the McKellar Committee to testify for the OWI.

Irving Asher, the producer-director and husband of Laura La Plante, was commissioned a captain in the Signal Corps. He requested that a sergeant, who had been his film-cutter, be commissioned and assigned as his assistant. "We always worked as a team," Asher explained, "and I'm helpless without him." The film-cutter was commissioned a captain . . . Captain Asher, who outranked the cutter because of his seniority as an officer here, arranged for their transportation to England. The cutter arrived in London 24 hours before Asher did. And because he arrived earlier in the European Theater, the film-cutter now outranks his boss, Asher.

At a luncheon of the Alumni Association of Columbia University the members began to discuss the success Columbia men have achieved in the world. Douglas M. Black, one of the trustees of Columbia, mentioned Wellington Koo and said: "He hasn't done so badly" . . . "Yes," agreed the venerable Nicholas Murray Butler with pride. "And to think that young fellow isn't 60 years old yet."

Ruth Gordon, the star, has joined her groom, Lieut. Garson Kanin, in Washington. Last week they were invited to a swanky dinner given by W. Averell Harriman. "We can't go," Kanin told his wife. "This is the only uniform I have. I worked in it all week and it's creased. And it's impossible to get a tailor in Washington now." Miss Gordon, however, unearthed a flatiron. Kanin pressed his suit, his wife ironed her dress—and during the operation, Ruth burned her hand. A local doctor treated the burn, bandaged her hand—and so Lieutenant and Mrs. Kanin, wearing the clothes they had pressed, appeared in time at the Harriman dinner.

Lieut. Marc Daniels of "This Is the Army" has a unique job in Hollywood. He doubles as both drill-master of the soldiers in the cast and dialogue-director for the movie . . . Paula Lawrence was in the Stork Club, complaining of her inability to get the houseman at the Langdon, where she lives, to paint her piano. He delayed the job for two weeks. "He finally told me why last night," Paula reports. "The houseman, Axel Nordquist, was busy training Gundar Hagg for his race against Gregg Rice" . . . When the veteran Harry Carey was asked to play the Grandpa role "Happy Land," he warned Director Irving Pichel: "If you want me to dodder, you got the wrong guy."

Michael Lewis, the young son of Sinclair Lewis and Dorothy Thompson, told his friends that his father is the greatest writer in the history of the world. His mother cautioned him about boasting and exaggerating. Michael, mindful of the Nobel Prize, the Pulitzer Prize and other honors heaped upon his illustrious father, believed that he hadn't exaggerated. "Who's a greater writer?" he asked . . . "Well," replied his illustrious mother, "there's Shakespeare, for one" . . . The next day Michael Lewis was heard telling his friends: "My father is the greatest writer in the history of the world, except Shakespeare."

Coal Ration Being Studied, Ickes Reveals

Solid Fuels Administrator Harold L. Ickes revealed yesterday the rationing of coal is being considered in view of the present tight fuel-supply situation.

"The situation may develop quite rapidly," Ickes said. "We may have to face it in certain sections of the country."

An aide emphasized that nothing final has been determined on the subject, but that plans are being drawn as a precautionary measure. No plans are being made for Nation-wide rationing, it was emphasized—only for the rationing of specific types of coal in specific shortage areas.

Ickes indicated that the Pacific Northwest and Canada might be the first rationed areas because of transportation problems. He pointed out, however, that "no part of the country is too well stockpiled."

The District is within easy transportation reach of the West Virginia smokeless bituminous coal fields and has direct rail access to the Pennsylvania hard coal fields, although it lies on the southern fringe of the anthracite consuming region.

Ickes pointed out that the three coal strikes had forced the coal industry behind its production goals.

"Even a six-day week might not be enough to catch up on production," he said.

Year's Plane Goal Is Set at 115,000

youngsters were told you can't fly the North Atlantic in fighters. You can't fly the Pacific. Well they are flying the North Atlantic and flying the Pacific in fighter planes. They are reaching their objectives and they are getting back—the wonderful American youth that doesn't know the word can't."

Arnold's statement to the Ramspeck Committee raised by 15,000 previous estimates given by the War Department to the House Appropriations Committee on the number of planes America will produce in the fiscal year that begins July 1.

The number falls short of the 125,000 the Army first set as an objective, but the downward revision was made because the war developments have shown the need for concentrating on heavier planes, officials said.

Without disclosing exact figures Arnold asserted that so many more bombers are going to England daily that the Air Forces need to recruit 12,000 more civilian workers to service the planes there.

Arnold, described at the hearing by Col. V. E. Gates of his headquarters staff "as a tough hombre always looking over your back," bluntly told the committee it was his policy and that of the Air Forces to lay all the cards right on the table.

Gates urged the committee to visit airfields and headquarters and said if committee members could find a better way than the Air Forces to handle personnel problems he would be glad to buy any members suggesting improvements a case of whisky.

56,000 Civilians Needed

Arnold told the committee that the civilian personnel army must be increased by 56,000 employes to reach a needed total of 386,000 employes during the year.

Questioning by Representative Manasco (Democrat) of Alabama disclosed that at the present time there are only 13 or 14 men behind each American plane, while Germany has at least 23 men behind each plane the Nazis send into the air. Before the war America had only 8.3 men behind each plane, officials said, while Germany then had 23. Manasco interjected the comment that Congress then wouldn't even allow the Air Forces sufficient gas to train pilots.

Full of pride in the Air Forces and confidence in their accomplishments Arnold asserted:

"There is no question in my mind as to the ultimate accomplishment of this vital mission with which we are charged—the defeat of the Axis through application of airpower. It will be accomplished and accomplished well, with the aid and assistance of our civilian personnel Army.

Bricker Indorses U. S. Participation In Postwar Setup

Columbus, Ohio, June 24 (AP).—Gov. John W. Bricker, a prospective candidate for the 1944 Republican presidential nomination, came out definitely and unmistakably today for American participation in a postwar international organization to preserve peace.

"Such an organization," said Ohio's third-term Governor in an interview, "must not only attempt to solve difficulties when they arise, but it must anticipate them and prevent recurring frictions between nations and peoples."

Speaking out more specifically than he has in the past, the tall, handsome executive of the State that has given the Nation seven presidents, said whatever kind of peace-maintenance association of nations is worked out must be "satisfactory to all or it will not work."

Center Site Sought

Dr. A. Ylvisaker of Chicago, director of Lutheran Service Centers in America, will arrive here today to inspect possible sites for a local service center. He will address a city-wide Lutheran laymen's luncheon today at 12:30 p. m. at Schneider's Cafe, Eleventh and E Streets Northwest.

Wallace Disagrees With Award In News Photographic Exhibit

By the Associated Press

It's lucky for Ollie Atkins that Vice President Wallace wasn't the judge of the White House News Photographers Association's first annual picture exhibit at the Mayflower.

Because if he had been, Ollie's shot of dancing zoot-suiters, carving the carpet in the mad throes of a high-stepping whirl, wouldn't have won the grand prize.

Wallace told Ollie so yesterday afternoon, as he presented him with the award.

"Mr. Atkins," said Wallace, "I am going to be very frank with you."

Then he went on to say that "I have looked over the extraordinarily good exhibit and have seen so many important pictures pertaining to the war effort that I can not see how the judges could have picked a zoot-suit picture in times like these."

Atkins, former Washington Daily News photographer, now with the Red Cross, grinned and ducked like a prizefighter against the ropes. In spite of himself, Wallace grinned and broke away from his prepared speech to say, "I think you'll agree with me. Mr. Atkins."

But Ollie didn't say. He just threw up his hands (after reaching for the prize trophy) and simulated defeat.

Then Wallace went on to tell the photographers that, "I know that abnormal movies and photographs have given Latin America a false idea of what the United States is like," adding that he thought the photographers would be wise "to shoot pictures which portray the true America with just a little less emphasis on the abnormal and the temporary."

Besides the grand prize, Atkins' picture took first in the feature class. Gus Chinn of the Washington Star won the sports class with a shot of a night football game, played in a sea of mud. Rexx Curtis of Harris & Ewing, photographers, won the spot news class with a picture of a grandmother being rescued from her flooded home.

The judges with whom the Vice President disagreed were Alexander F. Jones of The Washington Post, Ben F. McKelway of the Washington Star, John O'Rourke of the Washington News, B. C. Harter of the Washington Times-Herald and Franklin Fisher of the National Geographic Magazine.

Concert of National Symphony Conforms to Soloist's Dancing

By Ray C. B. Brown

Francis Garzia conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the fifth summer concert at the Potomac Watergate on Thursday night. Soloist: Atty van den Berg. Program: Overture to "Phedre" (Massenet), First Movement of Symphony in B minor (Schubert), Fetes (Debussy), Rakoczi March (Barna-Berlioz), La Procession Nocturne (Rabaud), Farandole from "L'Arlesienne" Suite No. 2 (Bizet), Bacchanale from "Samson et Dalila" (Saint-Saens). Dances to music by Bach, Gershwin, Shostakovich and Chabrier.

Postponed from Wednesday because of the blackout test, the fifth summer concert of the National Symphony Orchestra took place last evening before an audience of approximately the same size as the one that had dispersed in disappointment the night before. Atmospheric conditions, too, were about the same, with vagrant breezes doing their best to cool the sultry air. Between 3000 and 4000 persons found relaxation in the varied program arranged by Francis Garzia, and in the dancing of Atty Van den Berg, their enjoyment being manifested in generous applause.

BROWN

Well remembered here as a member of the Jooss Ballet, Miss van den Berg was cordially received in her appearances as a solo dancer. Lithe and supple in her movements, she has technical ease and a convincing way in characterization. Her four dances were as much studies in temperament as exhibitions of skill, and her choreography showed imagination. To the music of a Bach chorale, she was sedately ecstatic in the black garb of a penitent; in a flame-colored gown she was the embodiment of pleasure-seeking youth in "City Life" danced to Gershwin tunes; a reckless yet humorous spirit whirled "The Prodigal Daughter" across the stage to music appropriately borrowed from Shostakovich, and a fine bit of Spanish dancing was done to music by Chabier in "Swinging Skirt."

Francis Garzia arranged his program deftly to conform to the soloist and there were no abrupt contrasts. The danced chorale was preceded by Massenet's classically contoured overture to "Phedre" and by the first movement of Schubert's B minor symphony. "City Life" followed Debussy's "Fetes," a luminous tone-painting of metropolitan merrymaking, and the first part of the concert ended with Berlioz's brilliantly orchestrated version of the "Rakoczi March."

Credit for this stirring Hungarian national air, named after Prince Ferencz Rakoczi, leader of the revolt against Austria in 1703, is seldom given to the composer, Mikhail Barna, a gypsy violinist.

It was pleasant to hear again the romantic symphonic poem, "La Procession Nocturne," by Henri Benjamin Rabaud, one of the best pieces of music inspired by the Faust legend. The element of fantasy is admirably handled in a work characterized by poetic feeling. It deserves more frequent performances both on its merits and as a friendly gesture to the composer, who was conductor of the Boston Orchestra from 1918 to 1920.

A farandole by Bizet and a bacchanale by Saint-Saens were the other programmed offerings. Extra numbers included the Strauss waltz, "Wine, Women and Song;" the minuet that has made the name of Luigi Boccherini familiar to thousands of people who have never heard another note of his voluminous works; Pierne's "Entrance of the Little Fauns," Armas Jaernefelt's "Praeludium" and Smetana's "Dance of the Comedians."

Robeson Arrives

Paul Robeson, Negro singer, arrived in the city at 8:35 last night for his concert at the Water Gate tonight and gave a brief interview in which he expressed his keen desire to see the establishment of an all-Negro theater where artists of his race would be free to utilize their talents.

D. C. Officer Dies in Jap Prison Camp

Second Lieut. Irvin R. Sutphin of Washington was among more than 300 additional American soldiers who have died in Japanese prison camps since the fall of Bataan and Corregidor, the War Department announced yesterday on the basis of reports received through the International Red Cross.

SUTPHIN

Sutphin, a brother of Mrs. Edith Burroughs of 1228 W Street Southeast, was stated to have died on May 12 of malaria. Other major causes of death were listed as diphtheria, dysentery, pneumonia and beriberi. These deaths by diseases are out of a total of 11,307 Army personnel thus far reported prisoners of Japan.

Born in Warrenton, Va., 48 years ago, Sutphin grew up in that town and has been in the Army since World War I. He served for seven years with the Army of Occupation in Germany and went on duty in the Philippines 18 years ago. His family had not heard from him for more than three years.

Brereton Backed By MacArthur

sent to Mindanao in the Philippines out of reach of the enemy.

General Brereton informed subordinate commanders on December 7 that war was imminent and ordered all officers of combat crews to be ready for duty at all times.

"The dispatch reporting the attack on Pearl Harbor was received at Manila at 4 a. m. December 8 and was transmitted instantly to the air force and Brereton's headquarters had it in the hands of his organization commanders at Clark Field at 4:45 a. m.," General MacArthur said.

"The first flight of enemy bombers to reach Luzon (Manila is on the island of Luzon) was signaled by an air warning at 9:30 a. m., and fighters were dispatched for interception.

"At 11:30, another formation of bombers was reported. Four squadrons of our fighters were in the air while a fifth and last squadron completed gassing. The enemy bomber formation, which was joined by dive-bombers, attacked Clark Field in overwhelming force, striking just as the light fighter squadron taxied to a take-off.

"At this time and during the succeeding days, a number of airplanes were destroyed on the ground while landing for gas or while down for essential maintenance, but it never was the result of negligence on the part of Brereton or of his subordinates.

"Due to a shortage of fighters and to a lack of dispersal fields, bombers, the famous nineteenth group, were withdrawn to Mindanao and later to Australia and Java where they were soon engrossed in the struggle for the Dutch East Indies and Australia.

"Back in the Philippines, our fighters under the brilliant leadership of the late Gen. H. H. George maintained an unequal struggle with greatest persistency and success, finally succumbing to inevitable attrition, their last memorable attack being on Subic Bay March 2 when only four were available to strike."

Food Poisons 5 D. C. Men, 28 Others

By the Associated Press

Canton, Ohio, June 24.—Thirty-three persons, including several Army, Navy and War Production Board officials from Washington, were stricken with food poisoning following a luncheon at the exclusive Canton Club, City Health Commissioner F. M. Sayre reported today.

Twenty were hospitalized and described by attendants as violently ill, while 13 others were treated at their homes.

All these stricken were guests of the Hercules Motors Corp. at a luncheon arranged yesterday in connection with a tour of war plants here and at Massillon and Barberton.

Dr. Sayre said the poisoning cases had been traced to Boston cream pie served at the luncheon. James A. Finley, manager of the Canton Club, declared the pie had been baked yesterday morning in the club kitchen.

Among those hospitalized were:

R. L. Vaniman, 53, chief of WPB automotive division, Washington.

Lieut. Comdr. Thomas Matthews, 49, Navy officer assigned to WPB controlled materials division, Washington.

Maj. Alexander Dickie, 37, Army officer assigned to WPB controlled materials division, Washington.

Howard Porter, 47, Cleveland regional manager of the WPB production and facilities division, Lakewood, Ohio.

Irving White, 49, assistant director of the Canton WPB automotive division.

E. O. Kueneig, manager of the Canton WPB office.

E. C. Clark, General Motors Corp. representative, Detroit.

Election in Eire Proves Indecisive

Dublin, (Friday) June 25 (AP).—With 10 seats in Parliament still undecided in returns from Tuesday's voting, spokesmen for the major parties expressed certainty early today that Eire's first wartime elections would end with no group armed with enough votes to form a firm government.

The standing as of 2:30 a. m. today was: Fianna Fail of Prime Minister De Valera, 63; Fine Gael, headed by William T. Cosgrave, former Irish Free State president, 28; Labor, headed by William Norton, 16; Farmers, 14; Independents, 7.

U. S. Gypsum Spurns WLB Union Maintenance

The War Labor Board yesterday requested counsel for the U. S. Gypsum Co. to comply with a union maintenance order affecting its Warren, Ohio, plant to avoid taking the case to the President for action under his war powers, but John E. MacLeish, the attorney, said the decision not to comply was final.

It was indicated that the case would go to the White House next week unless the company makes an earlier decision to comply. WLB members hinted that they might ask the President o take the plant out of business as its output—building materials—was not necessarily vital to the war effort.

Board chairman of the company is Sewell Avery, president of Montgomery Ward & Co., which defied the WLB in a similar case a few months ago. It signed a contract only after President Roosevelt, acting as commander in chief, twice ordered it to do so.

The WLB also challenged the accuracy of recent advertisements in which the company pleaded its case. MacLeish said the board was quibbling and declined to make any further defense.

Wayne L. Morse, WLB public member, told MacLeish as one lawyer to another, with honest differences of opinion, I have lost cases too. I know how clients dislike to lose cases. Your client has lost a case. In a spirit of real pleading I urge upon you to recommend to your client that your company ought to get on the side of the Government for the duration.

"If the War Labor Board is wrong, it would not be the first tribunal that was wrong. Even though a litigant thinks our decision is an erroneous one, I believe he should say 'I think the War Labor Board is wrong but this is war and I am going to salute and comply.' I think that's the obligation the U. S. Gypsum Co. owes the Nation today."

Morse added, however, that "because of the nature of the business, I don't think it makes a great deal of difference whether the U. S. Gypsum Co. remains in business or not, if it persists in challenging the authority of the United States Government."

When Morse finished, MacLeish said quietly "the company has taken this position. It is a considered one, and it is final."

The company manufactures building materials. About 130 employes of the Warren plant are covered by the board's order of May 31 directing the company to sign a contract with the C. I. O. United Steel Workers containing maintenance of membership and dues check-off clauses. The clause provided that employes would have 15 days in which to withdraw from the union. If they did not do so, they would be bound to maintain their membership for the duration of the contract as a condition of employment.

Eugene Cotton, of the Steel Workers Union, said he was at a loss to understand the need for argument. "There is no new issue here," he said. "It is simply an open and outright defiance."

Pearl Harbor Service Wins Officer Honor

For directing administrative details occasioned by the sudden hospitalization of many battle casualties during the Pearl Harbor attack, Maj. Irwin J. Katz, Medical Administrative Corps, of Washington, was one of 34 men of the Hawaiian Department to receive the Legion of Merit, it was announced in Honolulu yesterday.

Major Katz, whose wife, Mrs. Gertrude Katz, and son, Richard, have lived at 7416 Georgia Avenue Northwest since evacuation from Hawaii, was born in Boston, September 5, 1904. He grew up in Brooklyn, N. Y., and entered the Army December 1, 1919. About 15 years ago he was stationed at Walter Reed Hospital here until November, 1934, when he was sent to the Hawaiian Islands.

He was cited "for exceptionally meritorious service in performance of duty on his own initiative." The citation continued, "He assumed direction on the administrative details occasioned by sudden admission to Trippler General Hospital of a large number of battle casualties due to the Japanese aerial attack on the Island of Oahu, December 7, 1941, and remained continuously on duty for 72 hours.

"In conducting this essential service, battle casualties were more rapidly admitted, thereby relieving the suffering of the numerous casualties. His initiative and ability reflect great credit upon the medical department of the U. S. Army."

COLLEGE-GIRL SONGSTRESS. Jean La Rue, who comes to Club 400 on Monday, is a graduate of the University of Michigan. Her family is nationally known in politics, but she prefers not to capitalize her real name and has adopted the La Rue tag for professional purposes. Jean was a social worker after her graduation, organized USO shows when war started. Before she knew it she was singing, as well as managing, for the USO. Joe Moss, owner of Club 400, heard her at a camp show lately, promptly booked her into Washington.

Sergt. Barney Ross, hero of Guadalcanal and former middleweight champion, and Johnny Ray, former manager of Billy Conn, recently sauntered into Hi Hat, had all necks craning.

HOLLYWOOD'S BECKONED to Dorothy Hutcheson, chic and temperamental pianist, who played at Treasure Island and Mayfair, but in recent months has been holding forth at New York's Mon Paree and Zebra Club. Dot will return to Treasure Island for two weeks, beginning next Monday. Then she's off to Hollywood for the role of an Indian girl in a picture to be filmed principally in Mexico City.

REAL SOUTHERN HOSPITALITY spreads its delightful aura over the Old New Orleans, where Owner Julian Richards seems to be an intimate friend of most of the folks that crowd his Sazerac Room. Singer Marian Carl also does her charming best to make everyone feel right at home. Once inside the Old New Orleans and you're away from the hurly-burly of our Boom Town . . . "Meatless days" at the O. N. O. are observed rigidly but graciously. Diners the other night had to get along with "iron pot chicken" (a glorious dish), pompano from the Gulf of Mexico and quail on toast!

Jean Lee of the big black eyes and sweet voice, will open at the Dubonnet Room on July 5. You'll remember her from the 400 Club, also as winning a Neptune Room contest.

PRAISE FOR BURT. Burt Lopatin, owner of Burt's Trans-Lux, but now with the Coast Guard in Alaska, is the subject of a letter of commendation from the commandant of the Coast Guard for "prompt and courageous performance of duty" in connection with rescue of survivors from the Gillam plane disaster and the crash of a recent Army bomber.

A MOVIE GRADUATE is Carlos Molina, whose "Music of the Americas" is now at Del Rios. After coming from Colombia with his first Pan-Am band, he was promptly grabbed by M-G-M, appeared in pictures with Garbo, Crawford, Shearer and Connie Bennett. By this time Carlos decided that he wanted to fulfill his original ambition of being an ace maestro. So he left the movies flat and reorganized his orchestra.

COMING TUNES. "Peoples Will Say We're in Love," from "Oklahoma," is the best tune of the summer. So say Leader Myles Hallett of the Starlight Roof, Impresario Maurice Kafka of the Mayflower, Roy Comfort of the Lounge Riviera . . . Maestro Milton Davis, who never misses picking hits before they get that way, says "The Blue of Evening" is going to top the hit parade.

Don Shalita, the new master of ceremonies, looks exactly like John Gilbert, top movie Romeo of the silent days. If you can remember back that far.

A PHILOSOPHICAL ORGANIST is Ken Thompson of the Neptune Room. He says night spotters have the longest memories, are always asking for things like the "Beautiful Ohio" and "Missouri Waltz." But it isn't once in two weeks that he's asked to go really classical. Ken has an especial affection for the "Maytime" music, pays his respects to boogie-woogie by saying that most people don't realize that it requires a fine sense of chord structure.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

A certain sophomoric trick is running like a disease through the halls of Congress. One member phones another and says, "This is Donald Nelson;" or "This is the President of the Antisaloon League," and invites the victim to make a speech at a "giant rally," but when the member shows up, there is no rally.

Recently, Congressman Brent Spence of Kentucky, was called on the phone by a man who said he was Claude Wickard. But Spence had been bitten before, so he said, "Oh, yeah?"

"I want very much to see you," said the voice, "to talk about funds for the Commodity Credit Corporation. May I come to your office?"

"No," said Spence. "I'm busy."

"May I see you later in the day?"

Spence put him off by saying, "Come to my hotel, if you want to."

That afternoon there appeared in the lobby of the Roosevelt Hotel none other than Claude Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture. For it was really Wickard who had called Congressman Spence.

Spence was not in the lobby, so Wickard phoned his room. "This is Claude Wickard," he said, "I'm waiting in the lobby."

"Well," said the Congressman, "you can just cool your heels a while," and he slammed down the telephone.

Claude Wickard is a patient man, but this was too much. With rising temperature, he waited a few minutes, then called again. This time Spence was really mad.

"Listen, this is the second time you've disturbed me, and it's not a joke any more. Get the hell off this line."

Wickard stamped out of the hotel and drove home.

Days later, he mentioned the affair to his friend, Marvin Jones, former chairman of the Agriculture Committee of the House. Jones was puzzled also, and he called Spence on the phone.

"Look here, Brent," he said, "what's the trouble between you and Wickard? Why won't you see him?"

"Wickard?" replied Spence. "That wasn't Wickard, that was somebody pulling a hoax on me."

"Oh, no," said Jones, "Wickard has been trying to see you for days, and you've been treating him like dirt."

"My heavens!" said Spence. "Was it really the Secretary of Agriculture?"

Senator George of Georgia sat in the Senate the other day reading an article in a local newspaper predicting that he would be Roosevelt's Vice Presidential running mate in 1944.

The political dope, expounded by the newspaper, was that FDR needed a conservative Southern statesman as Vice Presidential candidate in order to carry the South, and that George was the man to do it.

Stern-visaged Senator George, who actually has a delightful sense of humor, ran his penknife around the article, clipped it and scribbled on the margin:

"I decline the nomination."

Then he sent it by a page boy up to Vice President Wallace, who was presiding over the Senate. Wallace read the clipping, grinned appreciatively at Senator George.

NOTE: Though George and the President differed vehemently during the purge campaign of 1938, the Senator actually has remained one of the Administration's most effective battlers on many issues. Other Senators know he has no ax to grind for Roosevelt, so when he comes out for reciprocal trade treaties, or for supporting the President on foreign policy, he carries more than average weight.

The weather was hot outside, but no hotter than the grilling Fred M. Vinson received in his first appearance on Capitol Hill as Economic Stabilization director, at a closed-door meeting of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Farm bloc spokesmen went after him, hammer and tongs, regarding the Administration's price-control policies. However, the former justice of the United States Court of Appeals, who is No. 2 man in the new Office of War Mobilization, stood his ground. Having served in Congress, he knew how to take care of himself, and insisted that any further hikes in farm parity price ceilings would wreck the anti-inflation program.

Vinson highlighted his testimony with a statement that the country faced a serious shortage of corn for war industrial uses, chiefly in the manufacture of cornstarch and alcohol, as well as in the production of steel and aluminum. He revealed that 140 million bushels of corn was needed for industrial uses in the next four months, but that only 40 or 50 million could be procured.

Farmers, Vinson said, were "holding out" their corn or feeding it to hogs and cattle rather than sell at the Government ceiling price of $1.07 a bushel.

Note: It wasn't brought out at the time, but this was the reason behind the disclosure by J. B. Hutson, chief of the Commodity Credit Corporation, the day after Vinson's appearance, that Commodity Credit has notified farmers to pay up Government loans on 47 million bushels of 1942 corn by July 15 or surrender the corn. Hutson also revealed that the Commodity Credit is planning to "requisition" 25 million bushels, in addition, now in elevators, paying current ceiling prices.

No Cow Feed

The threatened shortage of butter and other dairy products could be traced to the same bottleneck, the stabilization boss declared. Due to corn hoarding, dairy farmers haven't enough feed for their poultry and milk cows. Rather than sell at $1.07 a bushel to dairymen, corn producers are fattening their hogs and beef cattle for market, Vinson said. As a result, vitally needed dairy products are running short, while pork production is rising. The two should be brought into balance, Vinson said, but this was impossible while corn hoarding continued.

Vinson had to run a gantlet of questions by Senators John Bankhead of Alabama, George Aiken of Vermont and Walter George of Georgia (a committee guest). They contended that farmers couldn't afford to dispose of their corn commercially at the present ceiling price.

The three Senators contended that farmers realized an estimated $1.19 or $1.20 a bushel for corn fed to hogs, based on the current high market prices for pork. Therefore, they asked, why should the farmer sell corn for commercial uses at $1.07 a bushel?

Aiken suggested that there would be plenty of corn available for war industrial uses and for the dairy industry if the price ceiling were raised to $1.25. Vinson replied that he wanted to see all farmers make a decent profit, but that his job was to hold down inflation.

"I intend to do that to the best of my ability, gentlemen," he concluded.

Loan League's Bond Holdings Soar in Year

Government bond investments of local building and loan associations soared to $9,593,108 as of May 31, as compared with $2,087,327 on the same date last year, it was reported yesterday.

Despite heavier bond purchases, cash on hand of the 25 member associations of the District of Columbia Building & Loan League rose to $8,607,542 on May 31 as compared with $5,160,916 last year. The increase in liquid condition reflected lessening demand for mortgage loans and a continued influx of new share money, it was pointed out.

New share money increased $15,142,646 during the year to a record total of $166,562,903. All together, the 25 associations here had 157,529 borrowing and investing members, according to F. Willson Camp, league secretary.

Assets of the group set a new high mark of $185,796,141, a gain of $11,751,830 as compared with May 31, 1942. Commenting on the shortage situation, Mr. Camp said:

"As expected, advances for mortgage loans declined somewhat although the drop was not as severe as anticipated. Total amount of mortgages outstanding, while less than that shown on April 30 this year, is still above hte amount listed last May. The various groups handled $2,829,443 in purchase, construction and other loans during May bringing the mortgage figure up to $164,290,093."

Auditors Name New Committee

Because bank operating problems are increasing proportionately with progress of World War II, the auditor's section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association has appointed a special committee.

This was announced by D. D. Whitcraft, retiring chairman of the section, in his report last night at the group's annual dinner meeting at Wardman Park Hotel.

The new committee is composed of R. Earle Haycock, auditor, Riggs National Bank, who is chairman, and Mildred S. Yeatman, auditor, Hamilton National Bank; Lewis E. Thomas, assistant cashier, Liberty National Bank; Harry L. Downey, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Harold W. Denison, Riggs National Bank.

James C. Elgin, a junior partner in W. B. Hibbs & Co. and vice chairman of the section's executive council, was named chairman of the latter group, succeeding Mr. Whitcraft, who became an ex officio member of the council. Mr. Elgin was succeeded as vice chairman by William F. Orrison, jr., American Security & Trust Co., who has been secretary-treasurer of the council. Mr. Orrison's recent office is now filled by Jack H. Wild, Washington Loan & Trust Co.

Local Agency Leads

The Washington agency of the Berkshire Life Insurance Co. of Pittsfield, Mass., has continuously led the 28 agencies of the company through the first five months this year, according to W. Rankin Furey, director of agencies.

J. E. McCombs of the local office is the leading producer of the company and Joseph Brown, also of the local branch, ranks fourth in the company's national list for the first five months.

Capital Gain Trails Area's

Washington department store sales increased 9 per cent in May over the same month last year, while the gain for the first five months this year was 7 per cent, according to the monthly report of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

The Capital's sales gain trails that of the entire Fifth Reserve District where retail sales of reporting department stores increased 18 per cent in May and 14 per cent in the five-month period.

N.Y. Halts Dodgers, 3-1; Cards Beat Reds, 5-1

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Happily for the other American League clubs, you can't steal first base; else the Nats would be so far in front they couldn't be caught by anything except radar. That's quite a show the Nats have been staging on the bases ever since the season started.

POVICH

Last year the Cardinals were supposed to be sensational, but the Hot-Foot Blueges are making the Cards of 1942 look like a spavined, rheumatic outfit by comparison. The Cardinals stole 71 bases last season when they were being acclaimed as the runningest team in modern baseball. The Nats have already stolen 64 bases with barely one-third of the season completed.

That's one of the reasons they're up there in second place, only two months after a brash St. Louis betting commisioner offered odds of 100 to 1 against Washington winning the pennant. The Nats are stealing bases almost as they please. They've clicked on 64 attempts out of 80. Breaking the figures down, you find that's a .742 average. Not bad? Zounds! It's wunn'erful.

The Nats have the opposition catchers downright jittery. That's the way it always is, when you've got a reputation for base stealing. The catchers have to hurry their throws, and hurried throws too often aren't good ones. That's why George Case, for example, who starts out merely to steal a base, ends up often enough to please him, with two bases as a result of a wild throw by a catcher with the jitters.

Case is the champion, of course. He has been the best base stealer in the league from the day he came up to the Nats from Trenton five years ago. At first it was a case of sheer speed. Then George learned how to slide, and now he's dynamite. He's stolen 18 bases to this point, out of only 21 attempts. That's a percentage of .857. What manager wouldn't like to have an .857 base stealer on his team?

We'd say Case is the thrillguy of the league. A game gets a big lift when George is on first with the Nats needing the tying or the winning run. The customers and the opposition expect him to steal. It's something to watch when he begins to flash down the baselines. We think it's the most exciting play in baseball.

Case takes his base stealing seriously. He's proud of his record of leading the league ever since he came into it. He's smart enough to know that stealing bases is his bread and butter. It's what lifts him out of the class of an ordinary outfielder. He knows his base stealing is worth about $5000 extra to him when it comes time to talk contract.

Incidentally, environment must do wonders for a fellow. Look at Bob Johnson. He wasn't supposed to steal bases when the Nats bought him from the Athletics last winter. In fact, he was supposed to be slowing up, badly. In his heyday he never stole more than 15 bases in any one season. Look at him now. He's caught the spirit.

Big Bob is in the mood, and he's stolen 10 bases to this point. More remarkable is that he has stolen those 10 in only 11 attempts. Even more remarkable is the fact that four of his steals have been of third base. You don't steal third unless you're a pretty good base stealer.

In one way, Johnson is more amazing even than Case. He gets a far better jump on the pitchers. Big Bob hasn't been around 11 years for nothing. He knows which pitchers are suckers for a base stealer. He doesn't have Case's speed, but he gets that terrific jump, and have you ever noticed what a beautiful job Johnson can do with a slide?

Case, Johnson and Mickey Vernon comprise a three-man base-stealing team that has had no equals in years. There are some who say that they'd rather have Vernon stealing a base for them than Case, but we don't put in with that. But Mickey isn't thrown out often. Like Johnson, his secret is getting a better jump than Case and a smart slide.

To Ossie Bluege's credit, he is letting the Nats run this season. It has been paying off. Folks are beginning to cotton to the Washington club. The Nats are getting to be quite an attraction on the road, as well as at home. They've put the hot-foot back in baseball.

Nats Pick on Favorite Foes In Athletics Here Tonight

Hold 8 Victories in 11 Games With A's To Date; Cut Yankee Lead in Half in Week

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The hot-stuff Nats move back into Griffith Stadium tonight against their favorite opposition, the Athletics, who have dropped 8 out of 11 games to Washington thus far this season.

Small wonder, then, that Connie Mack picks the Nats to win the pennant. From what he's seen of 'em they are, indeed, quite terrific. The A's have been standing off the Yankees and other clubs pretty well, but they have been duck-soup for the second-place Nats.

These are happy times for the Nats. They left Washington a week ago trailing the Yankees by four games. They mopped up the A's two straight and then slapped down the Yankees in three out of five, and are now only two games in arrears.

Those were nice games for the Nats to win in Yankee Stadium. For the last two years the Nats weren't able to win as many as three games in the stadium in the course of a whole season. The club got a big lift out of licking the Yankees three out of five. They always will think they should have won five straight.

All of a sudden, Bluege's pitching has become squared away nicely. Alex Carrasquel never had more stuff than on Wednesday when the Yankees scored four unearned runs to beat him. Rae Scarborough has been on the brilliant side with his relief jobs.

It's no discomfort to the Nats, either, to know that they have a couple of pitchers who can do very well against the Yankees, the club they must beat out. Milo Candini's shut-out of the Yanks the other day was a splendid job by a Yankee cast-off. When Dutch Leopard beat 'em earlier in the series, he became one of the two pitchers to beat the Yanks twice this year.

Bob Johnson, Mickey Vernon and Gerry Priddy are beginning to collect the hits that the Nats were supposed to get when the season started. Johnson has been on a protracted spree and for the month of May has an average of nearly .350.

Vernon blossomed as a power

How Many, Alex?

Alex Carrasquel, the Venezuelan, enjoying his best year with the Nats, celebrated his birthday yesterday. The Nats' roster records it as Alex's thirtieth, the baseball record book says 31. Lefty Gomez claims he pitched against Alex in South America 20 years ago. He could pass for 20 varied ages. Viva, Alejandro!

Champs' Lead Increased to 1½ Games

Gumbert Repeats Earlier Victory; Bucky Walters in Swing Shift Tilt

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 24.—The World Champion St. Louis Cards won handily from the Cincinnati Reds 5-1 in a morning "swing-shift" game today to give Harry Gumbert his second straight win over Bucky Walters in ten days.

The victory increased the Cardinals' lead over the Dodgers to one and a half games as Brooklyn lost to the Giants, 3-.

In fact, with his mates starting early on an extra-base attack, the tall right-hander had a shutout until the ninth when Woody Williams doubled for his third hit of the day, became the second Red to reach the keystone and was singled home by Frank McCormick.

The first inning found Harry Walker's single and Stan Musial's triple good for a run; two more followed in the fourth on singles by Danny Litwhiler and Ken O'Dea, Whitey Kurowski's double and an infield force, and in the sixth, Kurowski hit Walters' first pitch for a homer.

Melton Holds Flock to Three Hits

Snaps 6-Game Winning Streak Of Bums, Breaks N. Y. Loss String

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, June 24.—The Brooklyn Dodgers dropped a game and one-half back of the pace-setting St. Louis Cardinals today when they fell before the New York Giants, 3 to 1, in the final of their six-game series.

While the Cards were whipping the Cincinnati Reds, the Dodgers found their attack stymied by the three-hit piching of Cliff Melton. The victory, the Giants' lone success of the series, snapped the New Yorkers' five-game losing streak and marked the first defeat for the Dodgers after they had won six straight.

Successive singles by Dick Bartell, Nick Witek and Johnny Rucker off Whit Wyatt produced the first Giant run in the fifth. In the eighth with Ed Head pitching, the Giants tallied on an infield hit by Rucker, Med Ott's sacrifice, a wild pitch and an infield out. They picked up another in the ninth when, after loading the bases without getting a hit, Buster Maynard scored on Dick Bartell's long foul.

An error by Billy Jurges, two passes and Dixie Walker's infield single gave the Dodgers their only run in the eighth.

Big Ten Group Waives All Basic Eligibility

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 24.—Each university in the Western Conference today was assured of the manpower to field representative football teams this fall when Big Ten faculty representatives waived all basic eligibility requirements for the duration.

In making this revolutionary decision, the faculty committee by-passed the necessity of rewording conference by-laws merely by making the word "intercollegiate" ineffective.

"It has become obvious that for the duration intercollegiate athletic programs are to be essentially activities of the armed services," said Professor Ralph W. Aigler of the University of Michigan, chairman of the faculty committee. "It is the sense of the conference that the widest possible opportunities for participation by the student bodies of the member institutions in competitive sports should be made available, particularly as a means of preparation for their most effective contribution to the war effort.

"Many of the conference rules of eligibility are the outgrowth of considerations which have little, if any, force during the present emergency. Competition during the war period sponsored by a college or university shall not be deemed 'intercollegiate' as such term is used in the conference rules and regulations."

About the only eligibility requirements remaining intact were in respect to regular enrollment as a student, and non-receipt of compensation for athletic participation as a member of a team.

The faculty committee left scholastic requirements for eligibility up to each school and indicated the possibility of relaxing them to broaden the scope of participation in keeping with the main objective of training men for the armed forces through athletics. The Big Ten lifted its ban on use of freshmen in varsity sports last winter.

Pirates Beat Cubs, 2-1, for Rip Sewell

By International News Service

Chicago, June 24.—Truett (Rip) Sewell notched his fifth straight win over the Chicago Cubs today as the Pittsburgh Pirates took the final game of the series, 2 to 1. The loss dropped the Cubs back to the National League cellar.

Pittsburgh counted its runs in the third inning. Frank Gustine came in from third with the first tally when Bill Lee dropped a throw in trying to nab Bob Elliott at first. Subsequently, Elbie Fletcher filled out, but John Barrett scored after the catch.

Though he gave up 11 hits, Sewell had the Cubs in hand after the first inning when they pushed across one run. Lee was touched for nine hits.

Snaps 6-Game Winning Streak Of Bums, Breaks N. Y. Loss String

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, June 24.—The Brooklyn Dodgers dropped a game and one-half back of the pace-setting St. Louis Cardinals today when they fell before the New York Giants, 3 to 1, in the final of their six-game series.

While the Cards were whipping the Cincinnati Reds, the Dodgers found their attack stymied by the three-hit piching of Cliff Melton. The victory, the Giants' lone success of the series, snapped the New Yorkers' five-game losing streak and marked the first defeat for the Dodgers after they had won six straight.

Successive singles by Dick Bartell, Nick Witek and Johnny Rucker off Whit Wyatt produced the first Giant run in the fifth. In the eighth with Ed Head pitching, the Giants tallied on an infield hit by Rucker, Med Ott's sacrifice, a wild pitch and an infield out. They picked up another in the ninth when, after loading the bases without getting a hit, Buster Maynard scored on Dick Bartell's long foul.

An error by Billy Jurges, two passes and Dixie Walker's infield single gave the Dodgers their only run in the eighth.

Tigers Beat Indians, 7-4, In Twilight

Detroit, June 24 (AP).—For the first time this season the Detroit Tigers seized a series from the rival Cleveland Indians by gaining a 7-to-4 triumph in a twilight game tonight for Virgil (Fire) Trucks' seventh victory.

Trucks spaced 11 hits, including homers by Oris Hockett and Russ Peters. Meantime the Tigers chased Jim Bagby, usually their nemesis, in a four-run second inning. Bagby suffered his fifth defeat. The other three runs came off Allie Reynolds in the sixth.

Trucks gathered three singles to lead Detroit's 12-hit attack and drove in what proved to be the winning run in the sixth. Rookie Dick Wakefield got two hits and drove in two runs.

Grays Beat Stars In Eleventh, 6 to 5

Twice coming from behind to tie the score with a two-run cluster in the ninth and a singleton in the tenth, the Washington Homestead Grays tallied another marker in the eleventh last night at Griffith Stadium to turn back the St. Louis Stars, 6—5, before 8000 fans.

Ray Brown hurled all the way for the locals. Calhoun, who relieved Charley Boone, star pitcher, in the ninth was the victim of a bad break in the eleventh when his catcher, Graves, committed a balk with the bases filled and Ray Benjamin at bat, forcing in Edsel Walker with the winning run.

Browns Split Double Bill With Chisox

St. Louis, June 24 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox collected 16 hits off Pitchers Al Hollingsworth and Archie McKain in winning from the St. Louis Browns, 9 to 2, after the Brownies had swashbuckled their way to an 8 to 7 victory in the first half of a double-header today.

In a sixth inning uprising that brought McKain to the mound in a relief role the White Sox on five hits managed as many runs to break a 1-1 tie and went on to score once more in each of the remaining three innings.

Chicago's other big sixth inning in the first game and a White Sox run in the ninth which tied the score nettled the Browns. When an error put Don Gutteridge on first, and Pitcher Bill Swift walked Milton Byrnes and hit Chet Laabs to load the bases, Vernon Stephens singled to centerfield to score Gutteridge with the winning run.

Stephens and Julius Solters both homered in the second game. For Stephens it was his eighth of the season. Guy Curtright hit safely in his twentieth consecutive game.

Macks Defeat Bosox; Snap Losing Streak

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 24.—The Philadelphia Athletics came from behind to snap a six-game losing streak and whip the Boston Red Sox, 8 to 3, in the final game of their series today.

Trailing 2-0 in the sixth, the Mackmen took advantage of Boston misplays and careless fielding to score four runs. In the next frame, Bobby Estalella hit an inside home run with two on when Leon Culberson misjudged his line drive.

Free Trader Wins Charles Town Feature Race by Length

Buddy Root Adds Four Saddle Wins

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 24.—Free Trader, owned by Mrs. H. K. Berry, proved the best of a field of six competing in the sixth event on today's card. Jockey Buddy Root, leading jockey at the meeting, put up a strong ride to get the 4-year-old son of Granville home a length in advance of H. Howard's Jack Horner. Benjamin T. Pitts' War Target was third in the test of a mile and an eighth.

Free Trader was one of several well-played horses in the distance affair and paid $7.80. He was clocked in 1:53 3/5, creditable time over the fast track.

War Target went to the front in the opening stages and set the pace with Jack Horner second and Free Trader third. After the opening half, War Target tired and gave the pacemaking job to Jack Horner. Root, who had been saving ground early, then rallied Free Trader. The gelding collared Jack Horner entering the stretch and went on to hold sway to the end under good handling.

Root rode four winners for the day. The Kansas City veteran opened the card by winning with Mrs. L. M. Hanson's Bart O War, a $4.80 shot. Those who coupled Bart O War with Breeze Along, owned by L. S. Stewart of Washington, collected $41 in the daily double.

Root's other successes were aboard G. A. Garrett's Brocade, a $3.60 favorite, in the third event, and Joe Bruno's Knight's Duchess, in the seventh. Knight's Duchess was the public's choice at $4.80.

Jockey Leon Garrett had two winners. He won the fourth with Mrs. L. M. Hanson's Ler-Lin, at $22.20 and took the firth with Mrs. H. C. Brimmer's Ginger Man, a $6.60 shot.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Claude Feltner, leading trainer at the meeting, has taken over the full string of Mrs. E. D. Sowers, including the popular Navy. Feltner will take these horses to Hagerstown and then to Dade Park. He plans to start Navy against Saran, Two Timer and others if the Saturday handicap fills. Mrs. Sowers has sold Stadium to the O'Sullivan Farms at private terms. Vincent Bracciale, who graduated from the apprentice ranks yesterday, will ride Free Lance here and at Hagerstown. Today's feature is the James Sager Purse. By the way, it looks as if the Sowers outfit and Jockey Buddy Root have parted. Jockey Stanley Austin was forced to cancel his mounts yesterday. He struck his leg coming out of the gate on Honey maid and yesterday morning he could do little more than hobble around. Skeets Holland, who has been confining his efforts to training, is thinking seriously of making a saddle comeback. Holland weighs 118 and is noted for his ability to take off weight. His experience should make up for any zip that the years have taken out of him. James Carson Kirk, 7-months-old, 22-pound son of Jockey Carson Kirk, visited Chief Stewart T. C. Bradley yesterday and jabbered away lustily. James F. G. Leen has succeeded J. L. McDonald as trainer of Fred's First and Sir Chicle, owned by Mrs. Hilda August of Washington. M. B. Goss, who recently claimed Silver Beam, now has added Seventeen Guns to his string by the claiming route. Nate Tannenbaum's handicapping here has been sensational. He wouldn't mind if the meeting was extended. See you on the rail.—Bill.

First race—Volume has speed and may take the top and lead all the way in the day's opener. Chancer is a fair sort and belongs close. Reveiry can better that last.

Third race—Lady Mascara appears to have the edge in this rather open affair. Gay Player is getting ready to crack down and this could be the spot. Bob Junior will take it all if the mud comes up.

Fourth race—Neon Light breaks off the rail and should save enough ground to whip these. Crackshine and Charmful for the place and show.

Fifth race—Zelleen Zee seems suited by conditions in this field and I'm going to string along. Mr. Jim should go well. Cleaning Time likes this route.

Sixth race—War Smoke has plenty of speed and may be the right one in this field. Sir Jerome is fit, but may be overweighted. Rough Amos for the minor award.

Seventh race—Maranda was off poorly last out. With better racing luck, this one may take the top money. Celesti F. is in rare form. Teco Tack for the minor money.

Eighth race—Miss Pilgrim gets the rail position and may make the most of it to down these. Durable and Yankee Lad to fill out the cash bracket.

Best bet—War Smoke.

BREEZE ALONG, under slight restraint while following the pace, moved around leaders to take command and then withstood drive of MERRILY GO. The latter, within striking distance throughout, went between horses in stretch run, was getting to winner and appeared to be best. COME DOWN outspunted the field early, was under good handling while setting pace and had no excuses.

Daily Double—BART O WAR and BREEZE ALONG Paid $41.00

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400. For 3 and 4 year olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:11. Off at 2:12½. Winner, G. A. Garret's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROCADE, $3.60, $2.80, $2.40; TIPPY, $3.20, $2.80; ROSTAN, $3.00.

BROCADE was not hurried when outrun by NOM DE PLUME early, went around latter when rider pleased, was hard ridden in closing test and just held TIPPY safe. The latter was brought along slowly to stretch, was catching winner, but hung in closing strides. ROSTAN caught tired horses and could not threaten top pair.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400. For 4-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:37. Off at 2:38. Winner, Mrs. L. M. Hanson's ch. g. LER-LIN went around early leader to take command, opened daylight gradually and won under punishment. FRED'S FIRST was forced to race on the outside all the way and just lasted for the place when ACQUAINTANCE came again. The latter was off in front, dropped back and then came again under a bad ride. BELFONDS BOY had no excuses.

DARK LUNA broke down and was eased up in stretch.

16 Penalized For Driving For Pleasure

9 Are Acquitted, 3 Reported Absent In Cases Involving Unessential Car Use

Penalties against 16 convicted "pleasure drivers" were assessed last night at the hearing in the Force School Building, 1740 Massachusetts Avenue, in the initial session of the special hearing panel of the OPA.

At the first hearing of its kind in the District open to the public, nine charged with violating the no-pleasure-driving edict were acquitted and three were reported absent. Twenty-five cases were acted upon.

The panel, composed of three, include Frederich Stohlman, an attorney, chairman; John C. Conliff, jr., assistant United States attorney, and Peter Connolly, office of the solicitor, Postoffice Department.

Because he is to enter the United States Navy next Monday and because he had dutifully turned in a B gasoline ration book before going on his vacation prior to entering the service, John A. Parson, 6930 Ninth Street Northwest, was excused from a penalty by the panel although he readily agreed that he had used his automobile to go golfing.

Others did not fare so well.

Two severe penalties were assessed, one against Edward Phillips, 716 Lamont Street Northwest, whose stepson drove his wife and a number of children to a park for a picnic. Phillips said he had not known about it until advised by the OPA. He was fined 3 coupons from his next issued B book, "provided he's issued one." The other 3-coupon penalty was paid by Roy I. Weaver, 815 G Street Northwest.

Irene De B. Robbins, employe of the State Department, who told the panel she had heart trouble and was advised by her physician not to do any walking, surrendered one A coupon to the board for attending a party in her automobile.

"In my work I have to do a great deal of entertaining," she explained, "it's a part of my work."

John E. Litsas, 1422 K Street Northeast, who had purchased an automobile from his brother, was forced to turn in an A ration book, which had originally been issued the brother.

Charges against Rupert C. Kennedy, 416 H Street Northeast; June W. Kern, 103 Madison Street Northwest; Charles Towson, 1662 West Virginia Avenue; Ralph Haigler, 311 Sixth Street Southeast; Henry P. Leech, 3137 Nineteenth Street Northwest and Benjamin Lee, a Chinese laundryman, 3600 Fourteenth Street Northwest, were dismissed.

Floyd W. Howser, who could not be located for notification by the OPA was absent from the hearing as was Mike Kowanchik, whose address was given as 1717 East Capital Northeast. Richard B. Brickey, 1028 Florida Avenue also failed to show up.

Accused pleasure drivers assessed one A coupon each were: Robert Corbin, James T. Carmon, 711 Rhode Island Avenue; Bernice M. Bibb, 5733 Third Street Northwest; H. Paul Kaufman, 7208 Seventh Street Northwest; Ben Orleans, 6030 Eighth Street Northwest; William Haak, 1812 Ingleside Terrace Northwest; Walter Pollack, 1432 Saratoga Avenue Northwest and William Harris, who said he was an interior decorator, 522 Third Street Southwest.

Charges of pleasure driving against Floyd Robinson, 912 C Street Northeast, a cab driver, were referred to the office of Defense Transportation.

Jessie Purvis, 802 V Street Northeast was assessed two C coupons while in the charge against Lloyd F. Brain, an automobile salesman for the Columbia Garage, 1221 Ninth Street Northwest, decision was reserved.

Still another antiswelter movement was launched in Washington yesterday.

With the temperature in the 80's, the Sisterhood of Shirttail Secretaries was founded by eight casually-garzed, heat-hating secretaries in the Department of Information, Office of Price Administration. They, and all future members, are to be known as the Shirties, and are, they say, "the answer to the Brotherhood of Sensible Men."

The Shirties wear blouses—only out! With blouses out, the flaps swinging to and fro, the circulation of air "is what it ought to be on a hot day." One Shirty officially greets another Shirty by flapping her flaps. If one Shirty sees another Shirty with her flaps in, the flaps-in Shirty must buy a 25-cent war stamp.

"Such a violation is nothing short of treason," declared the two presidents, Ann Gulasi and Rosalie Lowther, who organized the Shirties.

The ukase drawn up yesterday directs that a Shirty shall wear flat-heeled shoes and anklets and, "of course, a suitable skirt." Violators of these points will be fined a war stamp. All rules are suspended on days off, it was agreed.

Campaigning is hardly the word for what the Shirties are going to do. Big meetings, small meetings, mass rallies, parties, whispering circuits, and many other things will be conducted by the Shirties to spread their gospel. Also, official Shirties are going to meet with officials of the Brotherhood of Sensible Men.

Girls who don't swing along are called "Stuffies."

Illegal Sale Of Poultry Ended Here

Black Market Put Out of Business By Agreement of Dealers, OPA Says

By Linton Burkett
Post Staff Writer

Threat of criminal prosecution of retail and wholesale poultry dealers who, the local OPA said, have been flouting price regulations, has resulted in putting a halt to most black market operations in poultry, John L. Laskey, OPA enforcement officer, said yesterday.

Recently, Laskey declared, OPA inspectors had succeeded in gathering evidence against 75 retail dealers, sufficiently strong to warrant criminal prosecution.

A meeting of these dealers was called and Laskey told them the OPA would be willing to consider the infractions in the light of civil offenses rather than criminal—provided they revealed the names of the wholesalers from whom they bought birds at black market prices.

After the evidence had been gathered against the wholesalers, Laskey said, similar procedure was used to make them reveal the sources from which they had obtained their illegal fowl.

"After the wholesalers saw the light, they also were willing to talk," Laskey said. "In this manner we are now going after the truckers and producers and any others who have been selling chickens at illegal prices."

Laskey also assured all dealers that if they would halt their black-market operations the OPA would be willing to ignore past offenses.

As a result legitimate dealers reported yesterday they had been able to obtain a few more chickens, and could handle them at legitimate prices, although the supply here is far short of the demand.

29 State Department Cannon Go to Scrap Pile, New Sites

Removing old cannon from the State Department grounds.

Familiar landmarks on the State Department grounds as far back as most Washingtonians can remember, 29 historic cannon were yesterday removed, some to the Navy Yard for scrap conversion, others to duration sites.

Truckloading of the relics, which had been captured by the United States from Great Britain, France, Spain and Mexico, began shortly before closing hours at the department, while employes watched curiously, or sentimentally.

One middle-aged woman asked querulously, "What are they doing with our cannon?" explaining that she had straddled them when she was younger.

This is "what":

Ten of the 29 were marked for the Navy Yard, where they will be scrapped for reuse against the Axis. Of these, 9 are bronze and will yield 20,000 pounds of metal, while the other is cast iron, weighing 5000 pounds.

To Army War College

Of the remaining 19, 10 will be located on the grounds of the Army War College. Perhaps the oldest gun ever to fall into the hands of American forces is included in this group. It was cast in Douay, France, in 1693, and was captured at the entrance to San Diego Harbor, Cuba, in 1898. Still another, used in the defense of Fort Sumter, S. C. in 1861, was captured by the Confederates when the fort fell. Taken to Richmond, Va., for overhauling, the cannon appears to have been used later against Federal forces. It was brought here in 1900.

Four others of those preserved from the scrap pile, with two anchors, will be placed on the grounds of "a naval air station" in Arlington, Va. These were also captured at San Diego Harbor.

Return to Battle Scene

Three trophies from the Battle of Saratoga in October, 1777, will be returned to the scene of the battle. Another, captured in July, 1779, during the Battle of Stony Point, N. J., will be mounted on the parkway approach of the Washington side of Arlington Memorial Bridge.

The last of the collection, a prize of the Mexican War which was exhibited at the centennial in Philadelphia in 1876, will go to St. Augustine, Fla.

Majority of the cannon which will be diverted into scrap metal are similar to those being preserved for posterity. Military men fingered the relics of other wars, reading their inscriptions, before the cranes lifted them.

Laundrymen Demand Aid From WMC

Reclassification Of Industry Asked; Union Leader Puts Blame on Low Pay

While representatives of the laundry and dry cleaning industry appealed to the War Manpower Commission for a "coordinating Government committee" to relieve a "critical" situation, Ralph Bernard, general organizer, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, declared yesterday that "substandard wages—some as low as $14.50 a week—are the only reason for the labor shortage in the industry in Washington."

A delegation of the textile maintenance industry, comprising the Linen Supply Association of America, Inc., the National Institute of Diaper Services and the National Industrial Launderers and Cleaners Association, was assured by the WMC's committee on essential activities that "all appropriate steps will be taken to assure the operation of these vital services," Stanley I. Posner, spokesman for the group, told a press conference.

He also disclosed that the group is contemplating submission of a plan to "Assistant President" Byrnes, which calls for a coordinating committee of representatives of the War Manpower Commission, the Office of Price Administration, the War Production Board and other offices which are handling various aspects of the laundry industry.

The specific demands made to WMC call for reclassification of the laundry industry as "essential to the war effort," by enlarging the group "production of textiles" to "maintenance of textiles." This would entail draft deferment for certain positions which are not granted under the present disignation of "locally needed," which the industry enjoys in Washington and various other labor-shortage areas.

Against these elaborate suggestions, Bernard simply put his plan of bringing laundry workers' wages up to "living wages." Contending that their pay has not been raised since 1938, when the minimum of 35 cents an hour was established, Bernard said that "Washington laundries would be assured of an ample labor supply, since there is no other industry here to compete with them, if they would raise their wages over substandard levels."

Negotiations with two local laundries, he disclosed, have broken down, and the cases were taken to the War Labor Board yesterday when management would not agree to a 50-cents-an-hour minimum, with 5 cents premium for the night shift, and other union demands.

Six Post Bond In Blackout Violation Cases

Six men posted collateral at precinct stations yesterday on charges of violating blackout regulations and authorities announced that 24 others were given warnings and 39 ordered to appear for hearings at the corporation counsel's office.

Various offenses, including smoking on the street, were listed. Police said that probably 50 other persons will be cited by wardens' reports during the next few days.

Two charges were placed against June Dollar, 46-year-old cab driver, of 1422 N Street Northwest. He posted $50 collateral to appear at court Saturday for allegedly smoking on the front steps of his home and for leaving a visible light burning in his room.

Others booked identified themselves as George Parsons, 28, manager of the Dy-Dee Wash, 418 New Jersey Avenue Northwest; Lewis Demas, 59, proprietor of a restaurant at 941 Ninth Street Northwest; Lewis P. Thomas, Negro, 59, janitor at 1320 Nicholson Street Northwest, and Ceaser Maschi, 58, 510 N Street Northwest.

Meanwhile Air Forces officials were evaluating the hour and a half test, which was held in seven States and the District.

Maj. Gen. Ralph Royce, commanding general of the First Air Force, stated that "The exercise is over now and we will evaluate its results carefully. Despite the mistakes that were made, it was valuable if for no other reason than it showed the need for having more tests to provide further training and eliminate the causes of error."

It was understood that the Army's reaction to the surprise test probably would influence the length and surrounding circumstances of future tests.

Spalding Appears Tomorrow In Opening Post Concert

With the idyllic background of one of America's most beautiful parks, the Nation's premier violinist—mild-mannered and graying Albert Spalding—will initiate The Washington Post Starlight Concerts in Meridian Hill Park tomorrow night at 8:30 and again on Sunday at the same time.

Known and honored in the Nation's Capital and throughout the world, Spalding's contribution to the determined effort of his own war-geared country has placed him among the great artists of all times.

And he understands the psychology of a people at war—their bitterness, their sorrow, their despair, their courage. He served in World War I as an aviator with the A. E. F. in Italy.

"Advance ticket sales for the first of the Starlight Concerts have been most gratifying," it was announced yesterday by C. C. Cappel, who is managing the series, "but there are seats available in every section still."

The tickets are popularly priced, ranging from 5 cents to $1.65 for single concerts and from $4.40 to $13.20 for each of the two summer series scheduled from June 26 through August 22.

In the planned splendor of Meridian Hill, with its magnificent statuary, its appealing flower-scented gardens and terraces, its dignified promenades, Spalding, his country's first master of the violin, will bring to those in Washington—who momentarily wearied of the hot summer nights, the surging, screaming flame of a world in battle, the endless files of men, the endless files of documents, a break in the pattern—a brief interval of things they once loved and knew, tranquillity, the gurgle of water over stones, the murmur of birds in their nests, the mystery of moonlight—and they may go back heartened and determined to see these again as a way of life.

Spalding himself is no paradox.

Scion of a famous family whose affluence was brought about by the sales of boxing gloves, tennis shoes and baseball bats, the great musician as a boy did not seek a baseball with Babe Ruth's or Heinie Groh's name autographed upon it—but a violin by Stradivarius.

Today he has several of them insured for $50,000 each and one even more rare—a Guarnerius insured for $100,000.

Guards of Honor

For the opening concert 100 Government Girl Guards of Honor, with their escorts, will be given 200 tickets by The Post in recognition of the Federal girl workers' success in the campaign six weeks ago to purchase and equip two warplanes for the Army and Navy.

Cappel said that during each concert a technician is seated among the listeners with a set of controls. Ideal acoustics depend upon the atmosphere, the direction of the wind and other elements.

Transportation facilities to Meridian Hill Park are excellent. Three Sixteenth Street buses stop directly at the park entrance.

Democratic Women Lease Quarters To British Club

The Woman's National Democratic Club has leased its premises at 1526 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest for a two-year period to the British Service Club, it was announced yesterday in a joint statement. The club will be operated by a committee of British officers and will be financed by subscriptions of members.

The statement commented that "many Washington clubs have opened their doors to British officers in this city . . . just as British clubs in London have shown similar hospitality to American officers. But, owing to the overcrowding in Washington, many British officers have felt the need for further club facilities through which they can meet each other and entertain their American friends.

"Accordingly," the statement added, "the Woman's National Democratic Club . . . consented to lease its premises to a British committee for two years, as it realized it would only be possible in these days to start a club of this kind on premises already equipped for the purpose."

Under the terms of the agreement, the Woman's National Democratic Club will have limited use of the premises.

Camp Registration

Registration for Camp J. C. C., recreational arts day camp of the Jewish Community Center, will continue until July 1 at the center, Sixteenth and Q Streets Northwest. The camp will hold sessions five days a week from July 5 through August 15.

City News In Brief

European Politics

Eastern European politics will be studied in two courses to be offered, beginning July 1, at the Graduate School of Georgetown University, the Rev. J. Hunter Guthrie, S. J., dean, announced yesterday. Dr. Olgerd P. Sherbowitz-Wetzor will teach the courses on international politics and internal political problems of our various nations during 1919-1941.

Photographer Hurt

Nathan Fine, 22-year-old Times-Herald photographer of Silver Spring, Md., suffered multiple lacerations and possible internal injuries yesterday in a 20-foot fall through a skylight at his office.

He was on the roof of the seven-story building, it was said, and climbed atop the skylight for an angle shot when he lost his balance and crashed through the flimsy frame to the fifth floor. He was taken to Emergency Hospital where physicians said he apparently was not seriously hurt. X-ray photographs were being made to determine the extent of his hurts.

17 Donate Blood

Coast Guard Quells Blaze

Coast Guardsmen yesterday afternoon succeeded in quelling a blaze of undetermined origin which destroyed an empty shed at the old Naval Reserve Dock, Union and O Streets Southwest.

District firemen were called to the scene and found that the sailors had the flames virtually under control. Boats moored near the dock were not endangered nor was a Government paper warehouse located about 50 feet away.

400 to Aid OPA In Store Check Of Food Prices

Four hundred women price assistant volunteers, backed up by 15 local price panels, will begin checking OPA food prices here next week in 1800 retail food stores.

Tonight at 7:45 p. m., even though community price panels have not yet been entirely set up, their captains of the 15 areas will meet with Sherwood Dodge, local OPA official, in Room G, the Chamber of Commerce Building, 1615 H Street Northwest, for instruction. They will meet again tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. in the same place.

Good Results Expected

The volunteer setup should operate better than any paid staff ever could, Dodge said last night. He said its purpose is not to see how many cases can be brought into the District OPA office but to see how many cases can be settled in the community.

Furthermore, Dodge said, retailers are 100 per cent behind the new program because it gives them personal contact with representatives of OPA, whom they can question, and because it is a guarantee that their competitors will be kept in line.

Procedure Outlined

Checking will begin with visits of price assistant volunteers to each store. They will check with managers and owners on prices If an error is discovered, the grocer will be informed. If he fails to adjust the price properly, he eventually will be summoned by the local price panel which will further advise him in neighborly fashion on his abrogation of the OPA rules.

However, if after this the grocer is unwilling to adjust his price, the case is referred to District OPA headquarters. Such cases will get A-1 priority for action, Dodge said.

Price assistant volunteers will continue their calls on grocers at regular intervals, thus keeping constant check on willful or unwillful price infractions.

New Washington Bishop May Be Named July 29

Selection of a successor to the late Right Rev. James E. Freeman, third Bishop of Washington, may be made at a special Washington Diocesan convention July 29 at the Episcopal Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, it was indicated last night.

Dr. Franklin J. Bohanan, chairman of the Diocesan Standing Committee, which met yesterday, told The Post that he was not authorized to say what business would be considered at the special convention, but it is believed that choosing a new bishop will be the all-important matter of discussion.

The standing committee has been the ecclesiastical authority of the diocese since the bishop's death.

Heat Wave, Entering 14th Day, Due to Tie Record Set in 1925

Washington's 90-degree heat wave stood to tie all records today as it goes into its fourteenth day, the Weather Bureau reported.

Should the mercury climb to 90 again tomorrow, it will establish a new record, beating by one day the mark set in 1925 when the city sweltered for 14 days continuously.

Yesterday, with the mercury soaring to 90 again, the city endured its thirteenth straight day when the mercury climbed into the 90's.

The lowest temperature was at 4:20 a. m. when the thermometer registered 73 degrees and the high was reached at 3:20 p. m. with 90 degrees.

Humidity in the morning was high, reaching 85 per cent saturation at 8:30 a. m., but dropped steadily until it reached 50 per cent by midafternoon, the hottest period of the day.

While the weather is expected to continue hot today, relief, although it may be only temporary, is expected when scattered thundershowers reduce the temperature late in the afternoon or evening.

Also the intense heat today is expected to be moderated by gentle to moderate winds.

Hearing Planned On New ABC Rule

cash requirement for wholesale-retail liquor transactions will be called in the near future, the Commissioners announced last night.

The hearing, which will have to do with the new A. B. C. regulations to go into effect July 23, eliminating credit arrangements between retailers and wholesalers, was requested by representatives of the retail industry. They contended the regulation was ordered without public hearing and would be discriminatory.

Also expected to be interested in the hearings is the OPA, which has stated unofficially that any such cash arrangement would be in violation of the President's anti-inflationary policy.

Women Want Office Work; Other Vital Jobs Go Begging

By Genevieve Reynolds

Serious about looking for a part-time job—or just talking? If you're snooty about the kind of work—especially if untrained and inexperienced —you'll have to wear down a little shoe leather.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

To save you time and steps, I arose early yesterday morning and went to the U. S. Employment Office in Silver Spring, Md. While the spokesman refused to be quoted by name, she indicated that the types of part-time jobs open to women are the ones that the women don't want. For example, there are numerous openings in grocery and department stores for part-time workers. Clerks are needed badly, but the majority of women consider such work beneath them, my informant said. And few want to become waitresses—yet the need is pressing.

Her answer to these lady-like qualms is—"Where you work doesn't matter if your character is beyond reproach."

A Few War Jobs Open

There are a few intermittent openings for housewives to work in privately owned plants working under contract with the Government on defense jobs. While the need for defense workers fluctuates in the nearby Maryland and Virginia areas, there always are a few openings. In many cases you will have to undergo a training period at your own expense or in one of the Government-sponsored classes in local high schools.. A few companies will train and pay you at the same time.

Since the majority of war plants want full-time and duration women workers, your chances aren't too good for part-time employment. However, if your patriotism leads you in that direction, you can find what you want with persistency.

Directors of employmnet centers complain that few women want anything but white-collar jobs. They maintain that women want either easy jobs or those forming a halo of glory around them. Their contention is that unskilled or untrained housewives would contribute more to the war effort by taking the places of those men and women in stores, restaurants, hotels and cafeterias who have gone into defense jobs. Furthermore, they pointed to the insistent need of laundry and dry-cleaning establishments.

Training Required

It seems that the most difficult to place are the women who insist on office jobs—yet they cannot type nor operate office machines. Mind you, with no experience or training, they are determined to have an office job.

Even a quick persual of the newspapers' ad pages bears out the same old cry—typists, stenographers. Many call for part-time workers. Still there are other openings for receptionists, hostesses, telephone operators—even bartenders.

E. Cleveland Giddings, special assistant to the president of the Capital Transit Co., speaking before the members of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs at a luncheon meeting yesterday, put in a plea for women to operate street cars and buses. Declaring that Washington is a community of white collar women, he said that the majority refused to answer the call for that type of work, despite the pressing need.

Paid While Learning

Base pay while training is $35 a week. The company foots the $400 training cost. In order to induce more women to become street car and bus conductors, the company is giving them Sundays off and arranging special working hours. While full time workers are preferred, the acute shortage may open up part-time work.

Mrs. Edna Robb, mother of a 6-months-old child, was presented as one of Capital Transit's first street car operators. Mrs. Robb pointed out that all women aren't temperamentally fitted to run street cars; for one thing a close time schedule both at home and while working must be adhered to.

"My greatest thrill is when I look back and see a car full of people," she declared, "all trusting me to deliver them safely. And the work isn't nearly so hard as it seems."

She looks at her job as something unique, and can't see why other women with a sense of adventure or love for people, wouldn't find running a street car fun, as well as essential to the war effort.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

In case you have thick ankles watch your step.

You can see for yourself the difference a correct and an incorrect stance makes in the appearance of your ankles. Kick off your shoes and stand before a full-length mirror. Now, stand with your toes pointed straight ahead—the correct position of your feet for standing and walking. Then, stand with the toes turned out, in the incorrect position.

You will notice that when you stand in the correct position your ankles actually look trimmer. And Dr. Armitage Whitman, noted New York orthopedic specialist, says that if you make a habit of standing and walking with toes turned out, not only will your ankles look thicker but they will get thicker.

Here is the explanation. Wrong use of the foot in toeing out flattens the arch and weakens the foot, and at the same time makes for flabbiness of the muscles along the ankle. Flabby muscle is bulky.

You may not consciously toe out in walking, but the result is the same when you teeter along in high heels, our authority maintains, for you involuntarily turn your foot out to the side to give yourself as broad a base of support as possible.

The remedy, of course, is correction of your walk. Think of the way you stand and walk and make a habit of pointing your toes straight ahead with your weight thrown to the outer borders of the feet. That is their strongest position. And every now and then get in a little foot exercise by walking a few steps with your toes curled under.

If you have to stand for long stretches in a streetcar or bus, learn to balance like a fencer or tennis player, with your knees flexible, instead of turning your toes out to get your support.

It takes time, but massage will reduce the size of your ankles. Place both hands firmly about one ankle and draw them up toward the knee in a long, smooth stroke. Repeat 10 times with one leg then the other. If you have been on your feet all day, lie on your back on the floor with feet elevated on a stack of pillows. Solutions have no reducing properties, but they do away with friction and seem to make the massage more pleasant.

Abuse of your feet doesn't stop at ruining your ankles. The ache that begins at your feet can even put lines in your face. If you have to stand all day to work—which is hardest on your feet—treat yourself to contrast foot baths at the end of the day. Turn on the faucet and run the very warm water, full force, then the cold, over your feet. Keep it up for a few minutes. Finish with a scrub with a stiff brush. And you might try sleeping with your feet slightly elevated to relieve congestion in feet and ankles.

Man Says 'Ellen' Must Not Let Her Sick Husband Cash Their Insurance Policy; He Outlines More Prudent Method of Easing Present Financial Pinch

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The story of "Ellen," in Tuesday's column, about the mortally sick man who has half-persuaded his wife to consider canceling his life insurance policy, makes my blood run chill. Tell her NOT to do it. It is not necessary, for one thing. And for another thing, if it is true that the man is to die soon (as his doctor has told the wife), that insurance estate is her only salvation. It can give her an independent income as long as she lives. If they cancel it now, she will be on relief in less than a year of widowhood.

Here is why she shouldn't cancel it: (I gather the policy has been in force for many years.) 1. It can be made PAID-UP. For example, if it is for $10,000, make it PAID-UP, by paying no more premiums and agreeing to accept a smaller amount of principal, say $8000, at death. 2. It can be EXTENDED. This can be done by paying no more premiums, and arranging to receive the full face value,—say, $10.000, or $25,000, or whatever it may be,—if death occurs within the next 10, 15 or 20 years. (Depending upon the present cash value of the policy.)

And here is how the policy can give her an INDEPENDENT income: 1. She can leave the proceeds at INTEREST with the company, guaranteed 3 percent (or better), and get an income every month without touching the capital. For example, $10,000 would pay her $25 a month; or $25,000 would pay her $62.50 a month, guaranteed. Or, 2. She can turn it into an annuity (I gather she is around 60), that would pay her $5 to $6 a month on every thousand,—as long as she lives.

Tell her to go to the Home Office of the company, explain what she is up against, and have them arrange the details. Any good insurance man will jump at the chance to be of service to a woman in her predicament. Tell her to ask for the Policy Holders' Service Department. Sincerely yours,

B. J. C.

Disgruntled Bachelor Is Spiritually Arid!

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Men such as "John Doe," your correspondent of June 16, make me so sad and disgusted by turns that one minute I want to offer them help; and the next minute I say, "Oh, what's the use?" Here is John Doe, unsuccessful in his search for the perfect bride;—who consoles himself by giving a 10-point lecture to old maids on how to catch a husband. The very first paragraph in John Doe's letter made me see very clearly his principal shortcoming, to-wit: his spiritual aridity . . .

I shall not attempt to discuss his points in 1-2-3 order,—but instead shall make a few comments in general. To be a good potential husband,—which is the first requisite for attracting a good potential wife,—a man must first prove himself a good friend; for love is nothing more than the continuance and deepening of good friendship. John is definitely a man of "double standards." Speaking of girls who don't measure up as wife material, John says: "If she doesn't measure up, the man may or may not decide to try to promote an affair, to amuse himself until something better comes along!" Somewhat later, he proclaims that if a girl is wise, she will accept any offer of a date with alacrity,—even if the proffer comes at the dinner hour, after the man has tried and failed to date six other girls before her!

His Off-Guard Actions Cool Women's Interest

There are far too many spiritually arid men seeking an angel wife. But the irony of it is that women always take their cue from the man,—unless, of course, they are quite inexperienced where men are concerned. Usually a woman can read a man's character much more quickly than a man can read a woman's. Call it intuition;—but the fact is, while often a woman cannot put her finger on a disturbing factor in a man's personality, some sixth sense warns her to "go slow," even when she finds him physically attractive. Tenderness, kindness, consideration,—these are the qualities a woman's "sixth sense" is looking for, in her future husband. But unless a man is accustomed to expressing these qualities, the slightest off-guard word or action tells the woman he hasn't got them, no matter how ingratiating his social manner.

I know men who know the art of winning women; but who can't hold them. Why? Because they were not their true selves when making love. One's sincerity is not affirmed by the ardor of one's lovemaking; (indeed, some sensitive persons abhor fervent lovemaking); but by the consistency of one's kindness. That feeling of peace and security one feels the minute one catches a glimpse of a loved one, often has nothing to do with kisses, beauty or intellect. Rather, it means a sure sense of oneness of spirit; and it may be achieved in friendship as well as in marriage.

Sees Little Help For Men Like Him

I should guess that John Doe doesn't have a very broad social horizon; and that he has confined himself pretty much to one type of girl,—"typing" her mainly by surface appearance. However, he has undoubtedly met a few worth-while girls; but in each case, I suppose, he was walled off from them by his own limitations. He is probably the sort of man who asks a girl whether she likes to cook and if she loves children,—because he isn't sensitive enough to find out these things indirectly, by intelligently noting her everyday actions and comments and the nature of her cultural interests, if any. And with that kind of man,—just what kind of help CAN you give him?

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

'Mind Your Manners'

If you are one of those who go native when boarding a streetcar in a crowd or standing in a food line, beware that you don't find yourself decorated some fine day with the Order of the Onion. Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, president of the Do Something About It League, announced yesterday that her agents were busy rounding up citizens who would receive both honorable rewards and booby prizes in her new "Mind Your Manners" campaign.

Mrs. De Goofey

"Since even Germany has started a drive against rudeness in crowds, I feel it is high time to prevent the 'me firsters' from getting any worse in this country," the reformer told her press conference. "However, I want to say that I have found Americans generally very well bred, patient and courteous in most of the trying situations they meet. Nevertheless a few boors, elbowers and pushers can upset all justice and fair play in any group.

"Now since war has forced us to turn savage abroad, we should especially see to it that we behave like human beings at home. And since we presumably are fighting against roughneck tactics on the part of nations, why should we permit citizens here to practise them at meat counters and shoe stores, on streetcars and buses?

"The first to be singled out for the award of Order of the Onion," continued Mrs. DeGoofey," will be the woman who in a crowd at a counter, speaks up and says 'I'm next' when she knows perfectly well the mousey little woman at her left and the Southern gentleman at her right were both there ahead of her. We see many women of this type around meat counters. They always take advantage of men and of less important looking women. In fact, I would advise any woman who wants any attention these days from tradesmen to disguise herself to look either important or rambunctious.

"I also expect to issue the Order of the Onion to the woman who, under pretense of knowing the butcher, slips around to one side, asks him a question and gets in ahead of those whose turn it is. Another food shopper to receive the award will be the woman who holds up the line in the chain store by sending back for something she has forgotten, by getting mixed up in her ration stamps, by not having her money ready, or by having to write a check."

Restaurant and cafeteria patrons will receive many Orders of the Onion according to Mrs. DeGoofey. Among them she designated the following:

"The patron so eager to get the food that he steps on the heels of the person ahead of him, also breaths—and coughs—down his victim's neck, pushes a tray in his ribs, and all but climbs on his back.

"The patron who never has his money ready for the cashier and who, after much fumbling, comes up with a $20 bill in payment for a 41-cent check.

Food Brings Out Savage Strain

"There is something about food that brings out the worst in people," continued Mrs. DeGoofey. "That is why I will concentrate my 'mind your manners' campaign in restaurants and grocery stores. But I also expect to issue dishonorable decorations to persons who push other persons around in department stores, in bank lines, on streetcars and buses, at movies and in the scramble to get taxis. I am especially eager to give the Order of the Onion to the person who sees a friend at the head of any kind of line and immediately arranges for that friend to transact his business for him thus prolonging the time that others in the line have to wait.

"Since we are all going to have to spend so much of our time from now on in crowds it is very necessary that we learn how to behave and also that we get the uncivilized members of the population in hand. That is why I intend to tag them."

"But aren't you planning to award any orchids," asked a club editor.

"Yes, I am offering a large sirloin steak and a baked potato with three pats of butter to every woman (or man) who can submit proof of having ridden on a crowded bus or streetcar all summer and of always having the token ready, always having moved to the rear when told to do so, and of having stood each way the entire journey without stepping on anybody's white shoes."

SHOP AND RUN

That Laundry Problem—

But, unlike the weather, someone is always doing something about it. This time it's a clothes drier that is sturdy enough to support a good number of garments and can be attached practically anywhere — to window, door frame, to dresser drawer, to a chair. There are eight sides to hang clothes on; yet it doesn't take up much space. Our description stops right there—for how it fastens is something you'll have to see! Since it comes unassembled, it's an easy matter to pack it up for traveling. Smooth, unpainted wood. $1.

'Make-It-Do' Note—

A shoe rack is more important than ever—now that each pair you buy has a significant story behind it! Your No. 17 and No. 18s will last longer if you keep them off the floor. You can get a wooden rack, unpainted, which holds nine pairs of shoes (if you can imagine that many) but takes up surprisingly little space. $1.25. There's another smaller one that holds six pairs and fits nicely under the clothes in your closet. $1.

A Find for Servicemen—

This is a gift that you can be sure he'll take with him. It's a grand little kit made of genuine leather and has a snap closing. Contains a prayer-book, a rosary, a St. Christopher medal and a scapular medal. There's also space for identification. $3.50.

Heelless Stocking Feet

These are fine if you're wearing open-heel shoes. They're stocking feet that cover just the ball of the foot. Made of lightweight cotton, and only 19c a pair.

For a Penny—

You'll never feel as refreshed at 5 p. m. as you did at 9, but you can look the part. One way is by removing all old make-up and starting from scratch. It's not such a task, either, with these cleasing and foundation pads that are saturated with a cooling make-up lotion. With a flick of a cleansing pad, off comes the old—and leaves a base for the new. No fuss or bother involved! 100 cleansing pads in a large jar and a separate plastic container to keep in your purse. $1.

Pamper Your Feet—

You're going without hose—you're wearing cut-out play shoes. All of which suggests that your feet are in the "footlights." You'll never be ashamed to admit they belong to you if you give them the beauty treatment they deserve with this remarkable foot stick. It wears off calluses and bumps, cools and relieves tired, burning feet and is particularly fine to use on feet that scale, crack or perspire. $1.

How's Your Good Neighbor Policy?

By Grace Martin

Associated Press Feature Writer.

You are going to be seeing a lot of your neighbors this summer, because the war will keep you both close at home.

You'd better check up on your good neighbor policy to see if it will stand the strain.

Do you borrow your neighbor's rake and hoe and never give them back until they are sent for?

If your neighbor has hurt his foot, would you mow his front lawn for him or would you just mow to the edge of yours and stop?

Do you constantly park the children with Mrs. Jones when you wish to go out, but fail to take time to shepherd the neighborhood children yourself?

And how is your perspective on your own children? Do you let them raise such a din early in the morning that nobody in the neighborhood can sleep? Do you fill your conversations with reports of how bright they are? Or do you keep them disciplined as you want the Joneses to discipline theirs?

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Many a mother has never troubled to make the vegetables she cooks put their best feet forward.

She throws vegetables into a pot of water and boils them hard until a fork goes through them. Then she drains off the water and expects this wry-tasting, brownish-green or yellowish-white mass to be acceptable to her children. Even a baby doesn't like it.

Vegetables should be firm and fresh and young. For children they should be cut in pieces small enough to cook quickly. They should be steamed so as to lose none of their color, flavor nor vitamin substance. Even without a regular vegetable steamer, the mother can make a very adequate one by putting a wire strainer over a kettle which fits it and adding a tight-fitting lid.

Then carrots come out in golden slivers; peas, whole in form and green as emeralds; turnips in creamy white cubes and other vegetables as nature intended them to look and taste. For babies the vegetables may be pressed through a sieve and delicately flavored with butter and salt. For older children they may be dressed up as they are or a tablespoon or so of thin white sauce added to them. All this if they like vegetables.

If they do not like vegetables, mother will have to be ingenious rather than forceful and think up ways to make vegetables so interesting that not a childish nose could be elevated against them.

For the child who has turned against vegetables, don't go to the mat at each meal and say determinedly, "You HAVE to eat your vegetables before you can have anything else." That's the way to make vegetables disliked forever.

Instead, try remarking casually, "You don't have to eat anything you really dislike, but try just a spoonful with your other foods and you'll soon discover why we all like vegetables." And then be content to allow it to be a spoonful.

Sometimes, to avoid arguments, vegetables can be added to other better-liked foods. Grind them raw and use them in a sandwich filling with a tart salad dressing. Add them to a fruit gelatine and serve as dessert. Mix them with nuts and rasins and mold a tablesponful on a leaf of lettuce with a lemon dressing. Cook and mash them and mix with milk and egg, well salted, and steam a nice custard that will do for the meat course.

If we want children to like a food we have to use ingenuity in cooking it and also provide enough varieties so the child can have his or her favorite. There are always one or two of any type food which is better liked than another and children's preferences shold be respected.

Our leaflet, "Foods for Young Children," offers recipes for the foods found in the children's diet. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

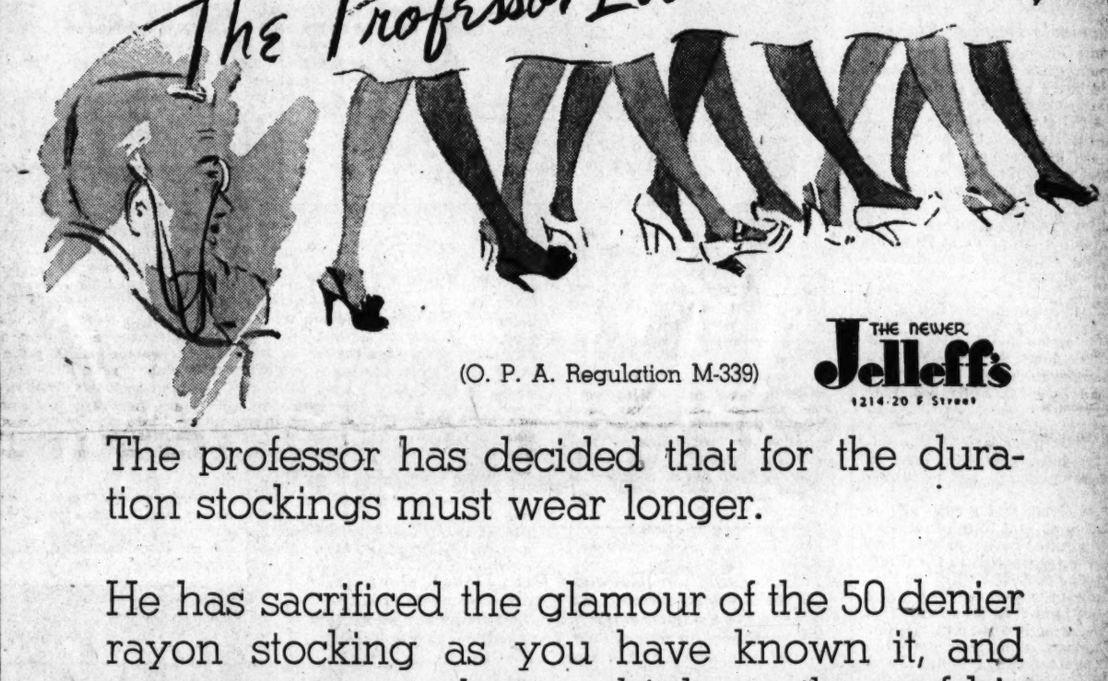
The Professor Looks at Stockings



(O. P. A. Regulation M-339)

THE NEWER Jelleff's
1214-20 F Street

The professor has decided that for the duration stockings must wear longer.

He has sacrificed the glamour of the 50 denier rayon stocking as you have known it, and now we present what we think are three of his best bets!

They are heavier looking than of old, but you won't spend so much money for stockings. Therefore, he thinks, you will help prevent inflation. Or will you?

1. Rayon with Cotton toe, sole and heel—a 75 denier, 51 gauge stocking—semi-sheer—in a beautiful gay-heart shade. $1.10 pr.

2. High-twist Rayon but heavier looking because 75 denier and 45 gauge—we call it semi-sheer—it has cotton reinforced toe—Sky glo, Sun gay shades. And O. P. A. tells us to sell it at 92c pr.

3. Fine Rayon, cotton reinforced toe —65 denier, 48 guage (sheerer than the ones above) beautiful in sky glow and sun gay—and it is only 98c pr.

The professor and we, too, are interested in knowing what you think of all this. Do you want more glamour and less wear—or less glamour and more wear?

Women's Club News

Women named to important commissioned and civilian posts with the Army since the last June meeting of the Advisory Council of the Women's Interests Section, War Department Bureau of Public Relations, will be presented at the luncheon today to feature the one-day conference opening at the Mayflower Hotel at 10 o'clock.

Miss Mary Barber, food consultant to the Secretary of War, will be among those to be introduced, but she has been with the War Department for several years. The newcomers will include Maj. Margaret D. Craighill of the Surgeon General's Office and the Army's first commissioned woman physician; Maj. Emma Vogel, director of the physical therapy section of the Medical Department; Maj. Helen Burns, director of the dietitians of the same department; and Mrs. Warwicke B. Hobart, recently named adviser on the employment of women, civilian personnel division, office of the Secretary of War.

The speaker will be Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, chief of the Army Service Forces, who will talk about "Army Housekeeping."

The morning program, which is off the record, will be starred with important Army officials. Maj. Gen. Alexander D. Surles, Chief of the Bureau of Public Relations, will make the opening remarks. Maj. Gen. George V. Strong, chief of the Army's Military Intelligence, will talk about safeguarding information. Col. Paul P. Logan, originator of the Logan bar in the soldier's field ration; Capt. Walter Anderson, who will discuss the community and the Army camp, and Maj. Walter Barton of the Surgeon General's Office will add to this list.

Two of the three women having colonel's rank in the Army will be heard, too. These are Col. Florence Blanchfield, Army Nurse Corps, and Director Oveta Culp Hobby, the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps.

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, chief, the Women's Interests Section, will preside at the sessions.

Women's Postwar Place

The officers and directors of Quota Club International, Inc., at a board meeting in the Westchester Country Club, Rye, N. Y., adopted a resolution urging that qualified women be given place at the international peace conference and in postwar planning. The text of the resolution follows:

"Whereas, women have always borne the brunt of sorrow and anxiety caused by conditions attendant upon war; and

"Whereas, women have ever been called upon to share in the burden and preparation of war, participation in war effort and readjustment of postwar activities; therefore be it

"Resolved, that the board of directors of Quota Club International urges that qualified women be given place at the international peace conference and in postwar planning, and be it further

"Resolved, that a copy of this petition be sent to the President of the United States, to the Prime Minister of Canada, to the Prime Minister of Australia, to the Secretary of State of the United States, to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, to the committee on participation of woman in postwar planning, to the Academy of Political and Social Science, and to the press."

The resolution was proposed by Dr. Hannah C. Simmons of Worcester, Mass., chairman of Quota's committee on postwar planning and was unanimously adopted.

International President Mrs. Frances L. Landry of Baton Rouge, La., presided at the three-day meeting, which took the place of the usual annual convention, canceled some months ago to assist in wartime transportation.

Quota International has clubs in the three countries to which copies of the resolution will be sent.

Women Receive Awards

Four more women workers have been cited for awards by the War Production Drive for suggestions which have contributed to industrial efficiency. Included in this group is the first Government worker, man or woman, to be so honored.

A certificate of individual production merit has gone to Amelia Schartoff, an inspector in the Tieflex Metal House Co. of Newark, N. J., who with two of her men coworkers, made suggestions for a new method of inspecting and gauging nuts which saves 29,472 man-hours per year.

A similar certificate has been awarded to Bessie Telban of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. in East Pittsburgh, Pa. Miss Telban devised a new method of insulating compensating joints on special Navy generators which saves 1564 man-hours and 800 square yards of glass cloth per year.

A 54-year-old Government worker, Mrs. Mary M. Murdock, who, after 32 years absence from office work, took a war job as a clerk in the awards branch of War Production Drive Headquarters in Washington, D. C., has also received a certificate of individual production merit. She developed a method of processing suggestions submitted to Production Drive Headquarters by labor-management committees which permits the servicing of all industrial inquiries for suggestions within 24 hours. With requests now being received at the rate of around 1000 per week, her suggestion saves 16 man-hours a day and about 264,000 sheets of paper per year.

During her year in Washington, Mrs. Murdock has never taken a day of annual leave or sick leave. One of her sons is in the armed forces, another a machine toolmaker in an aireraft plant, and a daughter replaced a man in a war job with one of the comercial airlines.

The fourth woman, Mrs. Ann Keefe Drewes, chief statistical clerk, R. C. A.-Victor Division of Radio Corp. of America in Harrison, N. J., was given an honorable mention. Her suggestion was that the hectograph machine could be used on certain forms to eliminate both a three-day delay and the cost of making photostatic copies.

Rationing's Effect on Diet

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

As I watch the gyrations of the rationing boards, I am reminded of a speech which was made by a great Conservative whom I knew in Edinburgh many years ago, somewhat to the following effect.

"In the city of Edinburgh, which comprises nearly a million souls, every morning there is left on every doorstep one bottle or two bottles of milk. The household may need three bottles of milk, and if that is the case, there bottles of milk are left on the doorstep.

"This intricate arrangement has been made possible by the development of capitalism. I doubt whether or not an entirely Socialistic government could deliver exactly the precise number of bottles of milk on the proper doorsteps as required by the citizens of Edinburgh every morning, Saturday and Sunday included, every day in the year."

The quotation indicates to my conservative mind that when the emergency is all over it is most unlikely that the distribution of food will be left in the hands of the bureaucrats. They have not shown any conspicuous knack in conducting an over-all paternal management of the distribution of food, nor adjusting food prices to the pocketbook level of the average American family.

Undoubtedly part of the confusion is due to the fact that Americans are unaccustomed to working on a point ration system. And that is a good augury for the future. But the way in which one commodity is advertised as very scarce one week and then the next week is so plentiful that its ration point value must be reduced in order to use up the surplus must drive a Socialistic-minded Harvard bureaucrat nuts. Again I am encouraged because it shows that the law of supply and demand still works no matter how much they attempt to calk up the holes in the dam, and I like to live in a world of law and order.

Another less economical spectacle, and one which I think involves a mistake, is the result of putting a time limit on when a certain ration stamp can be used. The American housewife, who is naturally a thrifty soul, finds herself Saturday with a whole page of stamps which will be useless Monday. So she proceeds to market, buys a number of things she does not immediately need and with the help of others like her, cleans out all the grocery stores and markets, so that even the cockroaches are feeling a depression.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Coffee, whether served hot or iced, needs to be brewed with precision. After a good brew is made then present it in an attractive manner. Here is iced coffee in a beverage rack, ready for out-of-door service

Many a bride has experienced the first marital quarrel over the brew of her coffee. A brew which resembles a cross between an unripe persimmon and a stormy day—bitter and cloudy—does deserve mention other than honorable.

It was Ben Jonson who said, "As he brews, so shall he drink."

That's the exact expression to describe a slap-dash method of making coffee. There's precious little to learn about coffee-making. A clear, aromatic infusion is not hard to attain.

Good quality coffee can easily be spoiled in the making. The selection of the coffee maker is important. This is a permanent piece of equipment which is used daily in most homes. Three things should be considered in the selection of a coffee-maker—ease of cleaning, endurance of material and a convenient size. After the selection of the coffee-maker, follow the three essential rules. They are:

Coffee-Making Essentials

1. A clean coffee maker. This should be as free from the odor of coffee as is the clean saucepan in which onions have been cooked. If the utensil has a long spout, keep a special brush with which to clean it. Wash all parts with hot soap suds and rinse with clear hot water each time used.

2. Always measure both coffee and water. This insures uniformity. Use standard measuring utensils. There are many different size tablespoons. A standard measuring cup as well as a standard measuring spoon should be used. In normal times 2 level standard tablespoons of coffee to 1 standard cupful of water is recommended. If this is too strong reduce it to suit taste. Or if the coffee supply does not permit this strength brew, then lessen the amount.

3. Never use the coffee maker for anything except coffee brewing.

The three methods of making coffee are, dripping, boiling and percolating. People vary in their preference because of the brew achieved or because one process is easier than another.

These are times, however, when you can't go to the stores and buy just the desired coffee maker. Long since have all aluminum coffee makers gone the way of many other household items. One of the kinds of coffee makers which has survived manufacturing restrictions is the siphon type. Even the siphon kind had to be changed to meet WPB regulations. In order to replace the rubber brushing that forms the seal on a vacuum type coffee brewer, the upper bowl has been precision ground, and also the lower level bowl. These two ground surfaces form a perfect seal. The advantages to the changes are that it never sticks, therefore eliminates breakage to a very great extent, and is easier ot clean.

Iced Coffee

To most coffee drinkers iced coffee is delicious and refreshing. But just as much care should be exercised in making it as in brewing hot coffee. There are several methods of making iced coffee.

Make the coffee twice as strong as usual and pour it while hot into glasses containing plenty of ice. This method retains the coffee flavor but requires double strength to offset the melting of the ice.

Or make the coffee as you always do, chill it and pour it into glasses containing ice.

But you can also make coffee cubes, then when the frozen coffee cubes melt the resulting beverage will not be any weaker. Try the following recipe:

COFFEE CUBES

Make coffee in accustomed manner. Fill the cube tray of automatic refrigerator with the coffee while it is still fresh and then freeze. To serve, place the frozen coffee cubes in tall glasses and fill with freshly made coffee. Since the cubes themselves are coffee, a regular-strength brew may be used instead of the double strength advised for coffee iced with plain ice cubes. Iced coffee has become so popular that I know many persons who serve it for breakfast. If you are planning a Sunday breakfast or brunch for guests, serve delicious iced coffee.

Of course, iced coffee does not make a meal; so let's consider the rest of the menu. Fresh fruit will of course start the meal. You might serve orange juice before guests go to dining table to eat the main part of the meal. This eliminates removing of the glasses from the table. Here are two suggested menus:

Breakfast Menu

Chilled Orange Juice
Corn Flakes With Strawberries
Cream Powdered Sugar
Scrambled Eggs Bacon
Hot Muffins Jelly
Iced Coffee

Breakfast Menu

Fresh Grapefruit Juice
Chilled Cantaloupe
Apple Pancakes Bacon
Sirup Iced Coffee

APPLE PANCAKES

Sift ¾ cup bread flour. Resift with ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 2 tablespoons powdered sugar, ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind. Beat 2 eggs and add to them 2-3 cup milk and ½ cup water. Make a well in the sifted ingredients. Pour in the liquid ingredients. Combine them with a few swift strokes. Ignore the lumps, they will take care of themselves. Melt in a skillet 1 tablespon lard. When the fat is hot pour in one-half the batter. Sprinkle generously with peeled, cored and thinly sliced apples. Pour the remaining batter over the apples. Turn the cake when it is browned underneath. Brown the other side. Serve hot with powdered sugar.

Bread and Milk

Some folks like bread and milk with sugar. Some even want a drop or two of vanilla extract in the milk. Others like a bit of salt. Still others like it plain. With or without trimmings, bread and milk are an efficient, nutritious combination.

Barbecued Frankfurters

A few quick tricks and dinner's ready with Star Frankfurters!

RECIPE:
6 Star Frankfurters (about ½ to ⅔ lb.)
6 Frankfurter Buns

Barbecue Sauce:
1 tbsp. Cloverbloom Butter or margarine
⅓ cup chopped onion
1 tsp. paprika ½ tsp. pepper
4 tsps. sugar
1 tsp. mustard 4 tsps. Tabasco Sauce
¼ cup catsup 3 tbsps. vinegar

Melt butter; add chopped onion and cook until clear. Add remaining sauce ingredients. With sharp knife, cut 3 inch slit in each frankfurter. Place frankfurters in flat baking pan, slit side up. Pour sauce over all and bake in 350° F. oven for 20 minutes. Baste frequently. Place frankfurters in split, toasted, buttered buns. Serves 6.

You can tell by the taste of Star Frankfurters that they're made from choice cuts of beef and pork. They're seasoned delicately to bring out the flavor of the fine meats they're made from. Another reason why Star Frankfurters always taste so good is because they're made fresh daily!

Have Armour's Star Frankfurters for dinner often! They make satisfying, delicious meals... and look how easy they are on your red points! Why, many frankfurter dinners take less than one point per serving!

New Addition To Chandler Clan--A Girl

"Happy" Chandler is more than living up to his name these days as he wears a grandfatherly grin and delves into the vital statistics of the latest addition to the Chandler clan—Catherine Chandler Gregg, who put in her appearance in Los Angeles a week ago.

Mrs. Chandler is out on the West Coast with her daughter and first grandchild, so that the Senator has to depend for his proud observation on her relaying of information. But even from 3000 miles away, the Senator is able to assure a listener—any listener—that little Catherine is a most remarkable child.

Her mother, Mrs. John P. Gregg, is making her home in Los Angeles, while her husband, Major Gregg, is serving with the Air Transport Command. Another Chandler daughter, Mimi, is causing proud fatherly smiles from the Senator. She is a promising young motion picture actress, finishing her second picture. She is now at work in "And the Angels Sing," a film starring Dorothy Lamour and Fred MacMurray.

Before the summer is over, the Chandler clan hopes to have a reunion in Kentucky. The young sons, Ben and Dan, have joined their mother in Los Angeles from school in Arizona and are looking forward to spending the torrid months in the Blue Grass State, where their father will join them when, and if, Congress adjourns.

AWVS Headquarters in New Location

New Offices Are Donated to Group By Church Head

By Martha Rhyne

Hostess to the ladies of the press yesterday was Miss Anita Phipps, president of the American Women's Volunteer Services, District of Columbia Unit, who is visibly proud of the work of the hundreds of volunteers here and wants the public to know about it.

And well they should—the American Women's Volunteer Service, now functioning like a well-oiled machine, started from scratch just two and a half years ago, patterned in part after the British Women's Volunteer Service. A national organization, the AWVS has been particularly successful in Washington, where there is such a great need for volunteer workers in vital war projects.

Now at home for the duration in the spacious rooms of the Education Building, adjoining the Church of the Pilgrims at Twenty-second and P Streets Northwest, the organization has the entire second floor in addition to several rooms on the third floor, and the assembly hall complete with stage and balconies. These headquarters, replacing the former AWVS offices in the Sumner Welles' estate stables, furnish offices, class rooms, a space for a week-day canteen and adjacent kitchen facilities. Moving day was June 1 and the organization occupies the new space without charge, with extreme gratitude to the Rev. Andrew Reid Bird, Minister of the Church, at whose invitation the AWVS occupied the new headquarters.

There's a busy, but not frenzied, atmosphere in the offices, and in the canteen, Mrs. John K. Mullen in charge, where nearby Government workers and Army and Navy personnel may buy inexpensive, delicious lunches in a neighborhood of Washington which offers few luncheon facilities.

Luncheon Canteen Serves Nearby War Working Crowds

A personal call at the information desk will enable any woman desiring to volunteer four hours service a week to this organization, which trains workers for every conceivable phase of war work. Classes in child care, first aid, civilian protection, preventive maintenance and running repairs; (in connection with the motor group), map reading, mass feeding, public speaking, telephone switchboard, fingerprinting, servants' classes in air raid protection, physical fitness, safety education and nutrition are available to volunteers.

In her pale blue cotton uniform, untrimmed save for buttons bearing the letters AWVS, Miss Anita Phipps is a "natural" for her job. She's just the type person—tall, terribly capable in physical appearance, diplomatic and tactful—you'd imagine to head the giant group of women who man and manage the AWVS.

Founded in December of 1940, the entirely self-supporting group has grown in personnel and scope of work. Launching a renewed effort to secure volunteers and effect an even larger work program, the AWVS has as vigorous beginning in their new location. Vacations and the heat have slowed registrations a bit, but the officers refuse to be discouraged. They've rolled up their sleeves and are planning new worlds to conquer.

New Zealand, Canada, Iraq Envoys Picked

President Roosevelt sent to the Senate yesterday nominations of Ray Atherton to be Minister to Canada, William C. Burdett to be Minister to New Zealand and Loy W. Henderson to be Minister to Iraq.

Atherton, a native of Brookline, Mass., and former American Minister to Denmark, is acting chief of the Division of European Affairs in the State Department. He will serve simultaneously as Minister to the government of Luxembourg, now located in Canada. He will succeed J. Pierpont Moffat, who died last January.

Burdett of Knoxville, Tenn., is a Foreign Service officer of the State Department. He will succeed Brig. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, who resigned last March and took a special assignment from President Roosevelt which has taken him to the Middle East and Europe.

Also a Foreign Service officer, Henderson moves into a new position. Since August, 1942, the United States has been represented in Iraq by Thomas Wilson, who had the title of Minister-Resident and Consul General. Henderson's home is Colorado Springs, Colo.

Named Minister To Canada

RAY ATHERTON,

Poles Deny Report

London, June 24 (AP).—Sources close to the Polish government in exile today branded as untrue London newspaper reports that Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, commander in chief of the Polish army at the outbreak of the war, had become the leader of a Polish underground movement.

Asthma Mucus Fought Thru Blood

If you suffer from choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma, here is good news for you. A prescription called Mendaco perfected by a physician in his private practice contains ingredients which start circulating thru the blood within a very short time after the first dose, thus reaching the congested Bronchial tubes where it usually quickly helps liquefy, loosen and remove thick strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. Fortunately Mendaco has now been made available to sufferers from recurring spasms of Bronchial Asthma thru all drug stores and has proved so helpful to so many thousands it is offered under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory. You have everything to gain, so get Mendaco from your druggist today for only 60c. The guaranteed trial offer protects you.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.
